Hurt When Auto Goes Over Bank.

Thomasville, May 26—Five young people residents of Midway, Adams county, were injured this morning about 1:20 o'clock, when an automobile in which they were riding turned turtle on the Gettysburg pike near the Five Mile House, east of this place. All were pinned underneath the machine, which had as its occupants, Charles Aurentz, Stella and Blanche Hildebrand, Regina Buntz and a married sister of the latter. Aurentz and Miss Blanche Hildebrand were the most seriously injured, while the other three members of the party suffered mostly from bruises and shock. The autoists were homeward bound from Lancaster, where they had visited yesterday, when the accident occurred. They left the Lancaster county seat about 11 o'clock. When nearing the Five Mile House, Aurentz, who was driving the car, misjudged the distance of the guard rails along the highway and as a result collided with one of the posts, machine going over embankment 7 feet in depth, to a summer road. The automobile turned completely over, rolling on its top and resting against a fence, pinning its passengers underneath. Being unable to extricate themselves the autoists remained prisoners until a machine carrying a party of officers from Camp Colt, Gettysburg, arrived upon the scene, and removed the young people from their perilous position. One of the officers, a lieutenant, rendered first aid. The party was taken to the office of Dr. Stambaugh, who dressed their injuries. Miss Blanche Hildebrand is suffering from cuts and bruises about the face, arms and hands. A wound in the palm of the left hand required nine stitches to close. Mr. Aurentz, besides sustaining cuts and bruises, sustained a badly wrenched knee and an ugly cut across the knee cap. The machine was badly damaged, the windshield being broken into fragments and the top crushed. The damaged car was removed to Hanover. The young people were conveyed to their home by a local automobile dealer.

Allied Lines Hold Strong Attack.

May 28.—So far there is no slackening in the present operations along the Aisne River front, where the Germans launched their surprise attack. However, the Allied lines are holding firmly, and the British and French have carried out a successful counter attack in spite of the efforts by the Germans to prevent.

By powerful and continuous assaults on the British position, the Germans succeeded in gaining a crossing of the Aisne River, and continued activities all along the 33 mile front.

A salient extending to the German lines north of Rheims is held by the British forces and both fronts are bearing sledgehammer blows.

The Germans are aiming blows in the direction of Paris, and the operations of the Germans are as powerful as those they launched on the Picardy and Flanders fronts.

Tankers Field Meet.
On the battleground of Gettysburg where their grandfathers of Union and Confederate armies waged the bloodiest battle of the Civil war, the boys of the U. S. Tank corps, some from the North and many from Dixie, will hold a great field meet on Decoration Day, to demonstrate how the Yanks united are going to treat the Kaiser rough.

"Treat 'em rough! Treat 'em rough!" is the yell of the tanks mascot, the bobtailed cat, which will occupy the box of honor on Nixon field, of Pennsylvania college, where the tournament of Tanks is to be held.

The Tank corps makes claim to the greatest single aggregation of athletics yet assembled to "catch and can the Kaiser." There are professional sprinters in their best trim to dash to Berlin. There is a company of pole vaulters ready to vault the Rhine, and there are boxers ready to meet Von Hindenburg, Bill Hobenzollern and Crown Prince Willie on any ground.

In addition to track events there will be various other features calculated to show the spirit the "Treat 'em Rough." A big comedy company featuring the best laugh-raisers of the camp, will open the festivities by parading from Camp Colt thru the streets of Gettysburg to the field where they will pass in review before the judges to be awarded prizes.

Soldier Boys Get Reduced Rates.
Our soldier-boys at Camp Meade and elsewhere throughout the country can come home on furloughs for a fraction of the former cost after the establishment of a new rule by which soldiers and sailors on furlough and traveling at their own expense will be given special passenger rates of about one cent a mile. The order issued by Director General McAdoo will become effective as soon as necessary forms are printed and distributed, probably within ten days. This fare will be allowed by ticket agents on presentation of a certificate from the commanding officer. The plan, arranged to make it easier for soldiers and sailors to visit their homes before going overseas, has been proposed by a resolution pending in Congress. It will apply alike to officers and enlisted men.

WOMEN GOOD POLICE
Are Doing Efficient Service In Great Britain.

Annual Report of Inspector Praises Work in Combating Evils of War.

London—The success of women on the police force is amply demonstrated in the annual report of Sir Leonard Dunning, H. M. Inspector of constabulary, just published.

Seven counties and 24 cities and boroughs have women "on the strength," and "their introduction into professional police work," says Sir Leonard, "may well help authorities to combat evils which have presented increasing difficulties to them for years past."

While most of the women are engaged in clerical work, others are given duties requiring the complete confidence of a woman or child, which a woman can win better than a man; the maintenance of public decorum among girls, supervision over female servants' registries, duties under the shop hours acts, food control orders and the like, and supervision over places of amusement catering for children.

It is not, Sir Leonard hopes, suggested that women should be employed in the suppression of public order and the arrest of dangerous or violent criminals.

With regard to the desirability of intrusting to them that part of the investigation of sexual crime which involves intimate conversation with the victim, the inspector declares that the police themselves were the first to recognize this, but until some years ago failed to find a woman of education who recognized this as a woman's work.

Sir Leonard pays tribute to the fine work being done by the women police employed by the ministry of munitions, and refers also to the success of the efforts of the women patrols. He denies that the increase of offenses by juveniles and the decrease of personal chastity of girls are the consequence of the war or that they have been aggravated by the war.

For years past police reports have laid stress on the decay of parental control and the influence of parents with a true sense of their responsibilities does not seem likely to revive. Crime is showing an upward tendency—reduced street lighting, bigamy, concealment of birth and infanticide, the latter directly due to circumstances of the war contributing.

ONCE SHOPMAN, NOW PEER
Present Head of British Munitions Board Is Remembered as Youth In Texas.

Topeka, Kan.—Godfrey J. B. Chetwynd, once a sheep rustler in west Texas, playing a flat cornet in the town band of San Angelo, now is Lord Chetwynd, head of the British munitions board. A part of his job was busting broncos, riding sheep trains to Chicago and rustling sheep on the plains.

In 1884, when he was twenty-four years old, just from England, he applied to George Richardson for a job. This was near Eden, where now runs a branch of the Santa Fe railway. He was welcomed by English and Scotch families who lived on ranches there, and naturally he fell into a sheep job. However, he was college bred and a civil engineer, and after three or four years he changed his base to San Angelo and made himself somewhat distinguished in his profession. Subsequently he returned to England and now, 25 years afterward, his former acquaintances in west Texas learn that he is the Lord Chetwynd who is head of the British Munitions.

No More Flour Paste.

Named For New Draft Call.
The local draft board Thursday morning selected a list of twelve men from whom nine will be chosen to make up Adams county's contingent to be sent to Columbus Barracks this week. The men will leave Gettysburg at 9:55 on Saturday morning. The following compose the list: Worth Kissinger, Gettysburg; C. A. McConley, Hanover, R6 Raymond E. Miller, Gardners Station; Nevin P. Mehling, Littlestown; Claire A. Robert, McKnightstown; Paul M. Rohrbach, Fairfield; Dorsey L. Rebert, McKnightstown; Isaac F. Metz, Iron Springs; Robert P. Smith, McSherrystown; Wm. F. Kepner Iron Springs; Paul J. Lower, Gettysburg; Earl W. Stalmsmith, Gettysburg.

The local board received from the state draft headquarters notice that, in all probability the same form of questionnaire used for last year's registered men would be used for those who will be registered on June 5th. The co-operation of the board, of the legal advisory board, and others is again asked in getting these blanks filled.

Additional affidavits will be required to support claims for deferred classifications on agricultural grounds in that it will be necessary to give the names and occupations of all persons living on the farm, and if it is claimed that the father is physically unable to work, a physician's certificate will be required to support this claim.

Wm. A. Sheely, clerk in the Farmers & Merchants Bank, sustained a painful bruise to the top of his moon-shiny head one evening last week. Mr. Sheely was enjoying a pleasure ride on the rear seat of the Maxwell car driven by Ivan Rick, of the Rickrode grocery, when, in passing over a breaker "Willie" was pitched against the top of the machine, with the above result. They were charged with furnishing liquor to soldiers. The women were taken to Gettysburg Monday evening where they will be given a hearing.

Hurt When Auto Goes Over Bank.

Thomasville, May 26—Five young people residents of Midway, Adams county, were injured this morning about 1:20 o'clock, when an automobile in which they were riding turned turtle on the Gettysburg pike near the Five Mile House, east of this place. All were pinned underneath the machine, which had as its occupants, Charles Aurentz, Stella and Blanche Hildebrand, Regina Buntz and a married sister of the latter. Aurentz and Miss Blanche Hildebrand were the most seriously injured, while the other three members of the party suffered mostly from bruises and shock. The autoists were homeward bound from Lancaster, where they had visited yesterday, when the accident occurred. They left the Lancaster county seat about 11 o'clock. When nearing the Five Mile House, Aurentz, who was driving the car, misjudged the distance of the guard rails along the highway and as a result collided with one of the posts, machine going over embankment 7 feet in depth, to a summer road. The automobile turned completely over, rolling on its top and resting against a fence, pinning its passengers underneath. Being unable to extricate themselves the autoists remained prisoners until a machine carrying a party of officers from Camp Colt, Gettysburg, arrived upon the scene, and removed the young people from their perilous position. One of the officers, a lieutenant, rendered first aid. The party was taken to the office of Dr. Stambaugh, who dressed their injuries. Miss Blanche Hildebrand is suffering from cuts and bruises about the face, arms and hands. A wound in the palm of the left hand required nine stitches to close. Mr. Aurentz, besides sustaining cuts and bruises, sustained a badly wrenched knee and an ugly cut across the knee cap. The machine was badly damaged, the windshield being broken into fragments and the top crushed. The damaged car was removed to Hanover. The young people were conveyed to their home by a local automobile dealer.

On May 18th she was removed to the home of her son, the only surviving child, at Hanover. She was born near Abbottstown, and was a daughter of the late Samuel and Susan Felix. Allied Lines Hold Strong Attack.

May 28.—So far there is no slackening in the present operations along the Aisne River front, where the Germans launched their surprise attack. However, the Allied lines are holding firmly, and the British and French have carried out a successful counter attack in spite of the efforts by the Germans to prevent.

By powerful and continuous assaults on the British position, the Germans succeeded in gaining a crossing of the Aisne River, and continued activities all along the 33 mile front.

A salient extending to the German lines north of Rheims is held by the British forces and both fronts are bearing sledge-hammer blows.

The Germans are aiming blows in the direction of Paris, and the operations of the Germans are as powerful as those they launched on the Picardy and Flanders fronts.

Tankers Field Meet.
On the battleground of Gettysburg where their grandfathers of Union and Confederate armies waged the bloodiest battle of the Civil war, the boys of the U. S. Tank corps, some from the North and many from Dixie, will hold a great field meet on Decoration Day, to demonstrate how the Yanks united are going to treat the Kaiser rough.

"Treat 'em rough! Treat 'em rough!" is the yell of the tanks mascot, the bottailed cat, which will occupy the box of honor on Nixon field, of Pennsylvania college, where the tournament of Tanks is to be held.

The Tank corps makes claim to the greatest single aggregation of athletics yet assembled to "catch and can the Kaiser." There are professional sprinters in their best trim to dash to Berlin. There is a company of pole vaulters ready to vault the Rhine, and there are boxers ready to meet Von Hindenburg, Bill Hohenzollern and Crown Prince Willie on any ground.

In addition to track events there will be various other features calculated to show the spirit the "Treat 'em Rough" A big comedy company featuring the best laugh-raisers of the camp, will open the festivities by parading from Camp Colt thru the streets of Gettysburg to the field where they will pass in review before the judges to be awarded prizes.

Soldier Boys Get Reduced Rates.
Our soldier-boys at Camp Meade and elsewhere throughout the country can come home on furloughs for a fraction of the former cost after the establishment of a new rule by which soldiers and sailors on furlough and traveling at their own expense will be given special passenger rates of about one cent a mile. The order issued by Director General McAdoo will become effective as soon as necessary forms are printed and distributed, probably within ten days. This fare will be allowed by ticket agents on presentation of a certificate from the commanding officer. The plan, arranged to make it easier for soldiers and sailors to visit their homes before going overseas, has been proposed by a resolution pending in Congress. It will apply alike to officers and enlisted men.

Narys answering a request to appear before Food Administrator Markley, at Gettysburg, on Tuesday morning was fined $25 for violating the food regulation by selling wheat flour without substitutes. The right leg was broken near the hip, and there are indications that the other leg may also have sustained a slight fracture.

WOMEN GOOD POLICE
Are Doing Efficient Service in Great Britain.

Annual Report of Inspector Praises Work in Combating Evils of War.
London—The success of women on the police force is amply demonstrated in the annual report of Sir Leonard Dunning, H. M. Inspector of constabulary, just published.

Seven counties and 24 cities and boroughs have women "on the strength," and "their introduction into professional police work," says Sir Leonard, "may well help authorities to combat evils which have presented increasing difficulties to them for years past."

While most of the women are engaged in clerical work, others are given duties requiring the complete confidence of a woman or child, which a woman can win better than a man; the maintenance of public decorum among girls, supervision over female servants' registries, duties under the shop hours acts, food control orders and the like, and supervision over places of amusement catering for children.

It is not, Sir Leonard hopes, suggested that women should be employed in the suppression of public order and the arrest of dangerous or violent criminals.

With regard to the desirability of intrusting to them that part of the investigation of sexual crime which involves intimate conversation with the victim, the Inspector declares that the police themselves were the first to recognize this, but until some years ago failed to find a woman of education who recognized this as a woman's work.

Sir Leonard pays tribute to the fine work being done by the women police employed by the ministry of munitions, and refers also to the success of the efforts of the women patrols. He denies that the increase of offenses by juveniles and the decrease of personal chastity of girls are the consequence of the war or that they have been aggravated by the war.

For years past police reports have laid stress on the decay of parental control and the influence of parents with a true sense of their responsibilities does not seem likely to revive. Crime is showing an upward tendency—reduced street lighting, bigamy, concealment of birth and infanticide, the latter directly due to circumstances of the war contributing.

ONCE SHOPMAN, NOW PEER
Present Head of British Munitions Board Is Remembered as Youth in Texas.

Topeka, Kan.—Godfrey J. B. Chetwynd, once a sheep rustler in west Texas, playing B flat cornet in the town band of San Angelo, now is Lord Chetwynd, head of the British munitions board. A part of his job was busting broncos, riding sheep trains to Chicago and rustling sheep on the plains.

In 1884, when he was twenty-four years old, just from England, he applied to George Richardson for a job. This was near Eden, where now runs a branch of the Santa Fe railway. He was welcomed by English and Scotch families who lived on ranches there, and naturally he fell into a sheep job. However, he was college bred and a civil engineer, and after three or four years he changed his base to San Angelo and made himself somewhat distinguished in his profession. Subsequently he returned to England and now, 25 years afterward, his former acquaintances in west Texas learn that he is the Lord Chetwynd who is head of the British munitions.

No More Flour Paste.
Hutchinson, Kan.—No more will Hutchinson, or for that matter, Kansas, paper hangers use wheat flour in making their paste. Strict orders have been issued by State Food Administrator Walter P. Inals against using wheat flour in making paste. He recommends the use of commercial paste instead.

WOMAN'S NERVES MADE STRONG

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Winona, Minn.—"I suffered for more than a year from nervousness, and was so bad I could not rest at night—would lie awake and get so nervous I would have to get up and walk around in the morning would be all tired out. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and thought I would try it. My nervousness soon left me. I sleep well and feel fine in the morning and able to do my work. I gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to make weak nerves strong."—Mrs. ALBERT SULTZ, 603 Olmstead St., Winona, Minn.

How often do we hear the expression among women, "I am so nervous, I cannot sleep," or "it seems as though I should fly." Such women should profit by Mrs. Sultz's experience and give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

For forty years it has been overcoming such serious conditions as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, dizziness, and nervous prostration of women, and is now considered the standard remedy for such ailments.

TRY A CUP!

The Rector's Vacation

By MABEL J. BOURQUIN

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Rev. Robert Nelson sat in his study with a look on his high-browed face that showed more of trouble than annoyance, and it was occasioned by the presence of the vestry in the room.

The vestrymen were ill at ease and they had come on a strange mission. The words of the silver-haired senior warden, mingled confusedly in his mind with a picture from past days.

"I hope you understand why we make this proposition, Mr. Nelson. You have served the church here very acceptably, and we certainly appreciate the fact that you have declined, for the sake of the poor and the sick of the town, to take a vacation during the two years that you have been with us. We have found, too, that you have taken the money you would have spent thus to provide outings for poor mothers. There is not a person in the parish who is not your sworn friend, and who is not better for your being here."

"I hope I can make myself plain, sir, for it is not an easy thing I have to say. But for the last two months or more you have not been looking well, and—you will pardon me—there seems to be a difference in your sermons. They lack courage and seem to come from a heart that is overburdened. If you are in trouble of any kind, we shall deem it a privilege to help you, if we can. I hope you do not consider us officious, Mr. Nelson."

"On the contrary, Mr. Grayson, I am deeply grateful for your sympathy, but I have no trouble that anyone can help."

"Then we shall have to conclude that you are worn out and sadly in need of a rest. So we have come to you with the proposal that you take a leave of absence for three months. This is hardly the time of year to propose such a thing, but the case seems to demand it. We will take care of matters in the parish until you come back. Go somewhere—take an ocean voyage if you wish; but, at least, come back with that strained look gone and that tired note out of your voice. We love you too much not to want to help you."

The old warden laid his hand on the younger man's shoulder, his voice broke and the rector's eyes filled with tears. Finally the minister broke the silence. "I deeply appreciate your offer, and while I do not feel that I need a vacation your friendship means too much to me to disregard your advice and such an unselfish request. I hope to be able to serve you better when I return. I do not know where I shall go, but will inform you as soon as I can decide. I shall probably start in the morning."

When he was alone he sat down and looked again into the flames. There he saw what he had borne in his heart for the past three months—a girl's face. No wonder his sermons had suffered! He wondered that with his days and nights of torture he had been able to attend to his parish duties at all. A vacation seemed a mockery. What he needed was hard work to help him to forget. But, after all, did he want that? Instead, with each passing day, he pressed his own heart into his wounds afresh, and he knew that he was not helping to answer his own prayers.

Where could he go? There was but one person he longed to see, and that he dared not do. Six months before he would have gone joyfully to a dozen different places, where the eager faces of old friends would have gladly welcomed him. Now, he thought of but one. Shut out from that, the world was a blank.

One afternoon in the preceding July Robert Nelson sat in a boat on the river, with a white, tense face, listening to a refusal from the lips of a girl who was no less agitated than he. Two months before, Muriel Waring had come with her mother from the neighboring city to spend some weeks with relatives. From that Sunday morning when the young rector had first seen her kneeling in his church, he knew that she was the woman he had dreamed of from boyhood, and he gave her the love and reverence that only such a man can give to a woman who is fitted to be his mate.

The worldly Mrs. Waring did not realize that her carefully trained daughter could think of a poor country clergyman, and permitted her to do as she pleased. So there followed weeks of long walks, visits to the parish poor and especially boat rides. They had so many interests in common, and the young rector realized the strength she could be to him in his chosen work.

And tomorrow she was going home, and this was their last day together. While the boat drifted softly down the stream, he laid his heart at her feet. To his dying day he never saw the setting sun without remembering how it shone on her face as she answered him.

"Mr. Nelson, had I dreamed that you would take such a step as this, I would not have permitted matters to go so far. I am to blame for this termination of your friendship, which has meant more to me than I can tell you. There is no other man living whom I respect more nor to whom I would sooner trust my life. But I am not free."

"Then you love some one else instead? I have been foolish enough to suppose you were heart free, and might, in time, come to care for me."

"Listen. When my father died, he left some money—enough, had we lived within our means. But mother has been very ambitious for me. She sent me to expensive schools, and spent large sums of money to establish me in society. She is hopelessly in debt. We are spending the summer in this little town because she dared not borrow the money to go to some fashionable resort, as she has always done. Do not look at me like that, Mr. Nelson. I did not know the truth of these things until a few days ago."

"So long as I can remember she has had a friend, an enormously wealthy bachelor, old enough to be my father. It has long been a standing joke that I am to marry him. I never imagined until this week that she meant it seriously. He and his sister are to visit us next week, and that is why we go back to the city. She told me that unless I accepted him we are financially ruined, and we shall have to earn our bread. So I shall be compelled to marry him, for her sake."

"Wait," interrupted the man in a strange voice, "do you love this man?"

"Love him? I simply adore him! Oh I know what you are going to say, that I am selling myself to him. But there seems to be no other way. You see, with a pitiful attempt at a smile, "how useless it is. Mother will never give her consent; and I cannot marry even you without it. And now, let us drop the subject, please. Here we are at the landing."

All this passed through his mind as he sat staring into the dying coals. He had never written, had obeyed absolutely her implied request for silence. But day and night her face was before him. He avoided every nook which reminded him of her, and worked with feverish energy one day, and brooded the next. He read the society notes in the morning paper before looking at his correspondence, and always laid them aside with relief at not seeing her name.

He felt that the warning of the senior warden was true, and that he was losing his grip. How was he to know that in the neighboring city a girl often cried herself to sleep with his name on her lips?

A falling log roused him from his reverie. He rose, packed his bags, and gave a few instructions to his housekeeper. He would go to the city, catch one glimpse of her face, and then hide, no matter where.

The postman passed and threw a letter upon the porch. There was but the one, and a glance at the superscription brought his heart into his mouth. He devoured, rather than read, the contents:

"My Dear Mr. Nelson:—I feel that you will be interested in a piece of news. Mr. Raymond has proposed at last—not to me, but to mamma. No wonder he was so long making up his mind, for he no doubt chivalrously hesitated at the pain his decision would cause me. They are to be married next week, and start at once for a wedding tour of Europe. I shall remain at the home of my cousin, Mrs. Ransome, of 326 Winton Place, indefinitely."

"I hope that all is well with you, and that we may meet again some day."

"Very sincerely, Muriel Waring."

Ten minutes later the rector called his housekeeper, and after a short interview with her, left her in tears of joy. Then he stepped to the telephone and called the senior warden, his voice vibrant with happiness.

"I start for the city tonight," he said, "and will be away for a month. Do not let the poor and sick of the parish suffer in my absence. When I return, please God, my wife and I will visit them together. Good-by." And the telephone bell tinkled a joyous refrain in the astonished senior vestryman's ear.

Divisions of Time.

Solar time means sun time at any given point. Standard time is a system of time reckoning devised by the railroads, by which the United States from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast is divided into four zones, each extending over 15 degrees of longitude, and with a time variation of one hour in each zone or belt. Thus, while every zone has a different time, that is standard time at all points within the zone.

The KITCHEN CABINET

If our America is to become ever greater and better, her citizens must be loyal, devotedly faithful, in every relation of life.—W. J. Hutchins.

GOOD WARTIME DISHES.

We cannot say that we are doing our part in food saving and, unless we waste absolutely nothing. Not a crumb of bread should be wasted. The crumbs that fall from the bread board in cutting bread will amount to at least a teaspoonful from a few slices. Put them in chopped meat, in puddings, in gravies for thickening instead of wheat flour. Any number of uses will occur to the cook who is trying to save.

Veal Sweetbreads.—Sweetbreads spoil quickly and should be used as soon as possible. Plunge them into cold water and let stand an hour, changing the water twice. Put them to cook in slightly salted acidulated water, boiling hot. Cook for thirty minutes rather slowly. Drain, plunge into cold water which keeps them white and firm. Now they may be used in various ways.

Liver.—Parboil one pound of beef liver five minutes. Drain. Remove the skin and veins, then brown in a little hot fat, chop, add a fourth of a teaspoonful of mustard, a teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of pepper, a fourth of a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and thicken with a teaspoonful each of butter and flour. Add a hard cooked egg and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Serve on corn doilies.

Corn Dodgers.—Boil together one cupful of milk and water, add a cupful of cornmeal and cook five minutes. Add two well-beaten eggs, two teaspoonfuls of salt and a tablespoonful of fat. Beat thoroughly and bake in a well-greased pan twenty-five minutes in a hot oven. Serve from the dish with a spoon.

Brown Steaks.—This is a good dish to make a little meat go a long way. Cut a pound of the neck of a beef in thick cubes, season, dredge with flour, brown in fat, then add salt and water to cover. When it boils up set it back and let it simmer slowly for three hours. Three-quarters of an hour before the end of the cooking, add carrots and turnips cut in cubes; a half hour before serving add potatoes. Three-fourths of a cupful of each vegetable will be a good proportion.

Don't you wish that you might see smiling peep out behind each tree? Don't you wish that you might hear All the brooklets shouting clear?

GOOD THINGS WITH BARLEY FLOUR.

In many of the darker cakes, using spices, molasses and chocolate, barley flour may be used exclusively in place of the wheat flour.

Sponge Barley Flour Cake.—Beat four egg yolks very thick, add one cupful of sugar, beating it in gradually, then add a tablespoonful of hot water, a cupful of barley flour mixed and sifted with one and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Fold in the egg whites, beaten stiff, and bake in a slow oven 15 minutes.

Plain Barley Cake.—Sift one and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder with two cupfuls of flour, a pinch of salt. Cream a fourth of a cupful of fat, add three-fourths of a cupful of corn syrup, a beaten egg, two-thirds of a cupful of milk added gradually with the flour and well beaten. Add a cupful or less of raisins well floured and stirred into the cake. Pour into a shallow pan and bake 25 minutes.

Barley and Oatmeal Drop Cakes.—Take a cupful of barley flour, one and a fourth cupfuls of rolled oats that have been well parched and put through the meat grinder, a half a cupful of fat, one-fourth of a cupful of brown sugar, the same of corn syrup, one egg, three tablespoonfuls of water, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two teaspoonfuls of salt mixed with the flour, and lastly a half-cupful of nuts.

Barley Cakes.—Take two cupfuls of barley flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a half teaspoonful of salt, sifted together. Cream a fourth of a cupful of fat with three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, add a half cupful of milk and three-fourths of a cupful of corn syrup. Drop on well-greased pans and bake in a moderate oven.

Barley Pie Crust.—Prepare the pastry just as usual, using barley flour instead of wheat. It will be a little harder to handle but will be tender and flaky. A most delicate pie can be made of custard, using three or four tablespoonfuls to sweeten, and two or three teaspoonfuls of lemon stirred into the mixture instead of the sugar, which does away with using sugar.

AN ATTACK OF GRIP USUALLY LEAVES KIDNEYS IN WEAKENED CONDITION.

Doctors in all parts of the country have been kept busy with the epidemic of grip which has visited so many homes. The symptoms of grip this year are often very distressing and leave the system in a run-down condition, particularly the kidneys which seem to suffer most, as almost every victim complains of lame back and urinary troubles which should not be neglected, as these danger signals often lead to dangerous kidney troubles. Druggists report a large sale on Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root which so many people say soon heals and strengthens the kidneys after an attack of grip. Swamp-Root, being an herbal compound, has a gentle healing effect on the kidneys, which is almost immediately noticed in most cases by those who try it. Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., offer to send a sample size bottle of Swamp-Root, on receipt of ten cents, to every sufferer who requests it. A trial will convince anyone who may be in need of it. Regular medium and large size bottles, for sale at all druggists. Be sure to mention this paper.—Adv.

WOMAN'S NERVES MADE STRONG

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Winona, Minn.—"I suffered for more than a year from nervousness, and was so bad I could not rest at night—I would lie awake and get so nervous I would have to get up and walk around in the morning would be all tired out. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and thought I would try it. My nervousness soon left me. I sleep well and feel fine in the morning and able to do my work. I gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to make weak nerves strong."—Mrs. ALBERT SULTZ, 633 Olmstead St., Winona, Minn.

How often do we hear the expression among women, "I am so nervous, I can not sleep," or "It seems as though I should fly." Such women should profit by Mrs. Sultz's experience and give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

For forty years it has been overcoming such serious conditions as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, dizziness, and nervous prostration of women, and is now considered the standard remedy for such ailments.

The Rector's Vacation

By MABEL J. BOURQUIN

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Rev. Robert Nelson sat in his study with a look on his high-bred face that showed more of trouble than annoyance, and it was occasioned by the presence of the vestry in the room.

The vestrymen were ill at ease and they had come on a strange mission. The words of the silver-haired senior warden mingled confusedly in his mind with a picture from past days.

"I hope you understand why we make this proposition, Mr. Nelson. You have served the church here very acceptably, and we certainly appreciate the fact that you have declined, for the sake of the poor and the sick of the town, to take a vacation during the two years that you have been with us. We have found, too, that you have taken the money you would have spent thus to provide outings for poor mothers. There is not a person in the parish who is not your sworn friend, and who is not better for your being here."

"I hope I can make myself plain, sir, for it is not an easy thing I have to say. But for the last two months or more you have not been looking well, and—you will pardon me—there seems to be a difference in your sermons. They lack courage and seem to come from a heart that is overburdened. If you are in trouble of any morning when the young rector had first seen her kneeling in his church, he knew that she was the woman he had dreamed of from boyhood, and he gave her the love and reverence that only such a man can give to a woman who is fitted to be his mate.

The worldly Mrs. Waring did not realize that her carefully trained daughter could think of a poor country clergyman, and permitted her to do as she pleased. So there followed weeks of long walks, visits to the parish poor and especially boat rides. They had so many interests in common, and the young rector realized the strength she could be to him in his chosen work.

And tomorrow she was going home, and this was their last day together. While the boat drifted softly down the stream, he laid his hand on her feet. To his dying day he never saw the setting sun without remembering how it shone on her face as she answered him.

"Mr. Nelson, had I dreamed that you would take such a step as this, I would not have permitted matters to go so far. I am to blame for this termination of your friendship, which has meant more to me than I can tell you. There is no other man living whom I respect more nor to whom I would sooner trust my life. But I am not free."

"Then you love some one else instead? I have been foolish enough to suppose you were heart free, and might, in time, come to care for me."

"Listen. When my father died, he left some money—enough, had we lived within our means. But mother has been very ambitious for me. She sent me to expensive schools, and spent large sums of money to establish me in society. She is hopelessly in debt. We are spending the summer in this little town because she dared not borrow the money to go to some fashionable resort, as she has always done. Do not look at me like that, Mr. Nelson. I did not know the truth of these things until a few days ago."

"So long as I can remember she has had a friend, an enormously wealthy bachelor, old enough to be my father. It has long been a standing joke that I am to marry him. I never imagined until this week that she meant it seriously. He and his sister are to visit us next week, and that is why we go back to the city. She told me that unless I accepted him we are financially ruined, and we shall have to earn our bread. So I shall be compelled to marry him, for her sake."

"Wait," interrupted the man in a strange voice, "do you love this man?"

"Love him? I simply detest him! Oh I know what you are going to say, that I am selling myself to him. But there seems to be no other way. You see, with a pitiful attempt at a smile, "how useless it is. Mother will never give her consent; and I cannot marry even you without it. And now, let us drop the subject, please. Here we are at the landing."

All this passed through his mind as he sat staring into the dying coals. He had never written, had obeyed absolutely her implied request for silence. But day and night her face was before him. He avoided every nook which reminded him of her, and worked with feverish energy one day, and brooded the next. He read the society notes in the morning paper before looking at his correspondence, and always laid them aside with relief at not seeing her name.

He felt that the warning of the senior warden was true, and that he was losing his grip. How was he to know that in the neighboring city a girl often cried herself to sleep with his name on her lips?

A falling log roused him from his reverie. He rose, packed his bags, and gave a few instructions to his housekeeper. He would go to the city, catch one glimpse of her face, and then hide, no matter where.

The postman passed and threw a letter upon the porch. There was but the one, and a glance at the superscription brought his heart into his month. He devoured, rather than read, the contents:

"My Dear Mr. Nelson:—I feel that you will be interested in a piece of news. Mr. Raymond has proposed at last—not to me, but to mamma. No wonder he was so long making up his mind, for he no doubt chivalrously hesitated at the pain his decision would cause me. They are to be married next week, and start at once for a wedding tour of Europe. I shall remain at the home of my cousin, Mrs. Ransome, of 326 Winton Place, indefinitely."

"I hope that all is well with you, and that we may meet again some day. Very sincerely, Muriel Waring."

Ten minutes later the rector called his housekeeper, and after a short interview with her, left her in tears of joy. Then he stepped to the telephone and called the senior warden, his voice vibrant with happiness.

"I start for the city tonight," he said, "and will be away for a month. Do not let the poor and sick of the parish suffer in my absence. When I return, please God, my wife and I will visit them together. Good-by." And the telephone bell tinkled a joyous refrain in the astonished senior vestryman's ear.

Divisions of Time: Solar time means sun time at any given point. Standard time is a system of time reckoning devised by the railroads, by which the United States from the Atlantic to the Pacific coast is divided into four zones, each extending over 15 degrees of longitude and with a time variation of one hour in each zone or belt. Thus, while every zone has a different time, that is standard time at all points within the zone.

The KITCHEN CABINET

If our America is to become ever greater and better, her citizens must be loyal, devotedly faithful, in every relation of life.—W. J. Hutchins.

GOOD WARTIME DISHES.

We cannot say that we are doing our part in food saving and saving unless we waste absolutely nothing. Not a crumb of bread should be wasted. The crumbs that fall from the bread board in cutting bread will amount to at least a teaspoonful from a few slices. Put them in chopped meat, in puddings, in gravies for thickening instead of wheat flour. Any number of uses will occur to the cook who is trying to save.

Veal Sweetbreads.—Sweetbreads spoil quickly and should be used as soon as possible. Plunge them into cold water and let stand an hour, changing the water twice. Put them to cook in slightly salted acidulated water, boiling hot. Cook for thirty minutes rather slowly. Drain, plunge into cold water which keeps them white and firm. Now they may be used in various ways.

Liver.—Parboil one pound of beef liver five minutes. Drain. Remove the skin and veins, then brown in a little hot fat, chop, add a fourth of a teaspoonful of mustard, a teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of pepper, a fourth of a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and thicken with a teaspoonful each of butter and flour. Add a hard cooked egg and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Serve on corn dodgers.

Corn Dodgers.—Boil together one cupful of milk and water, add a cupful of cornmeal and cook five minutes. Add two well-beaten eggs, two teaspoonfuls of salt and a tablespoonful of fat. Beat thoroughly and bake in a well-greased pan twenty-five minutes in a hot oven. Serve from the dish with a spoon.

Brown Stew.—This is a good dish to make a little meat go a long way. Cut a pound of the neck of a beef in inch cubes, season, dredge with flour, brown in fat, then add potato water to cover. When it boils up set it back and let it simmer slowly for three hours. Three-quarters of an hour before the end of the cooking, add carrots and turnips cut in cubes; a half hour before serving add potatoes. Three-fourths or a cupful of each vegetable will be a good proportion.

Don't you wish that you might see Spring peep out behind each tree? Don't you wish that you might hear All the brooklets shouting clear?

GOOD THINGS WITH BARLEY FLOUR.

In many of the darker cakes, using spices, molasses and chocolate, barley flour may be used exclusively in place of the wheat flour.

Sponge Barley Flour Cake.—Beat four egg yolks very light, add one cupful of sugar, beating it in gradually, then add a tablespoonful of hot water, a cupful of barley flour mixed and sifted with one and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Fold in the egg whites, beaten stiff, and bake in a slow oven 15 minutes.

Plain Barley Cakes.—Sift one and a half teaspoonfuls of baking powder with two cupfuls of flour, a pinch of salt. Cream a fourth of a cupful of fat, add three-fourths of a cupful of corn syrup, a beaten egg, two-thirds of a cupful of milk and add a half cupful of flour and well beaten. Add a cupful or less of raisins, well floured and stirred into the cake. Pour into a shallow pan and bake 20 minutes.

Barley and Oatmeal Drop Cakes.—Take a cupful of barley flour, one and a fourth cupfuls of rolled oats that have been well parched and put through the meat grinder, a half a cupful of fat, one-fourth of a cupful of brown sugar, the same of corn syrup, one egg, three tablespoonfuls of water, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, with a teaspoonful of salt mixed with the flour, and lastly a half-cupful of nuts.

Barley Cakes.—Take two cupfuls of barley flour, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a half teaspoonful of salt, mixed together. Cream a fourth of a cupful of fat with three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, add a half cupful of milk and three-fourths of a cupful of corn syrup. Drop on well-greased pans and bake in a moderate oven.

Barley Pie Crust.—Prepare the pastry just as usual, using barley flour instead of wheat. It will be a little harder to handle but will be tender and flaky. A nice dairy pie can be made of custard, using this, or four small apples to sweeten, and two or three teaspoonfuls of coconut stirred into the mixture instead of the sugar, which does away with using sugar.

The Benefits From Tonall Long After The Price Is Forgotten.

John Houtz, residing at 1017 Church street, Lebanon, Pa., tells the public in this statement the great relief he got from the use of one bottle of Tonall.

"I suffered from gas on the stomach. I took one bottle and gained immediate relief, and now I can rest at night with ease."

I worked at the Lebanon Boiler Works and Tonall was recommended to me for my ailments, and I am glad to recommend Tonall to the suffering public, and to say that the joys of good health are remembered long after the cost of Tonall is forgotten."

This testimony was given May 11, 1918. Tonall is sold at Auker's Drug Store, New Oxford, Pa.

Through the efforts of Congressman Brodbeck, the post office department at Washington has decided to institute a village delivery system of mail in Red Lion. This will mean that the citizens of Red Lion will have their mail delivered to them direct to their homes.

NEW OXFORD, PENN'A.

PROBLEM IS SOLVED; SMALL SACRIFICE REQUIRED

Consumer Assured of Stocks For Preserving—Should Cut
Table Use One-Quarter—Manufacturers Provided For.

The patriotic Pennsylvanian will join hands with Mr. Hoover and Mr. Helms in their effort to save sugar, in order that our allies in Europe may be supplied with that very necessary article of diet. After all, the task set for the consumer is not a heavy one. "Cut your use of sugar about one-quarter," said Howard Helms, U. S. Food Administrator for Pennsylvania, to an audience of Philadelphia housewives a few days ago. Surely not an onerous requirement.

To the manufacturer of certain products containing sugar the Food Administration says:

"Limit your use of sugar to 80 per cent of normal," and even to this rule there are exceptions in favor of manufacturers who produce such necessities as fruit and vegetable preserves, catsup, chili sauce, canned milk, jams, jellies, ice cream, medicines, apple butter, honey, and meat preparations in which sugar is used for preservation.

For the housewife who desires to lay away preserved or canned food supplies against the future, special dispensations have been made. A simple system of sugar certificates enable her to obtain sugar in 25-pound lots from her regular grocer for such purposes, as well as the usual supply for current table and cookery use, in lots of 2 to 5 pounds at a purchase for residents of towns and cities and in 5 to 10 pound lots for country dwellers. To obtain these small current supplies no certificate is required.

There is plenty of sugar in Cuba and Hawaii, but enough ships to transport it all cannot be had, but you Uncle Sam has arranged to give the American public 80 per cent of the usual amount and that's enough. Just "do your bit" in this sugar matter—the little bit the government asks of you—and the problem will be solved. Save a teaspoonful here and a tablespoonful there, and help to whip the Hun.

USE A LITTLE LESS MEAT IN YOUR DIET

Reasonable Reduction of Consumption Necessary to Aid in Supplying Our Allies.

While the Englishman has been limited to two pounds per week of any kind of meat, the dweller in the good old Keystone State has been permitted for the last two months to "eat his head off" if he felt like it. Now poor old John Bull must pull his belt a little tighter still, for his weekly ration has been cut to less than a pound a week of such flesh as beef and other "butcher's" meat, and a small additional quantity of bacon, lard, rabbit, venison or horseflesh.

Pretty tough for John; for you will remember that he has always been a heavy meat eater, and the "roast beef of old England" is famous around the world. But John Bull is at war and we are fighting with him, shoulder to shoulder. In the matter of food, we are better off than he; it is our good fortune, not our right, in this world crisis. We would have no real cause to complain if we were compelled to take pot-luck with him. How much less cause, therefore, for any American to grumble or whine when the Food Administration asks him to cut down his consumption of meat a little—just reasonably—to meet the demand for shipment abroad to hungry John, who right now has mighty little of his favorite food and who, as our ally in arms and messmate, is entitled to this slight consideration?

Meat once a day is enough for most of us. Smaller portions, and less "heavy feeding" would make most men and women healthier, wealthier and happier. In this country right now the supplies of other food than wheat, meat and sugar are greater than ever before in history. Utilize this condition of abundance to aid our Allies and save the world from the domination of the Hun.

FOOD CONTROL RESTRICTIONS

One thing that people are beginning to recognize is that the Food Administration will be just as ready to raise the restrictions upon the consumption of food when conditions warrant as it was vigorous in applying them. The Food Administration is a war agency. It is not an agency for correcting the habits of the American people, or for reforming American economic practices. It is co-operating with the American people to help them to win the war—AMERICAN GROCER.

Battles in Kitchens.

The most momentous battles of the "Great War" will be fought and won in American kitchens. The American woman has in her keeping the destinies of the world and will fight the decisive conflict for a free earth. In her own kitchen with no other uniform than the kitchen apron and surrounded by her little ones she will "go over the top" to victory.

Barberry is a Hun—Kill It.

The tall barberry is an enemy of the United States, because it is an enemy of wheat. Wheat rust is spread with the pollen from the barberry flower. Cut out the barberry by the roots before it has time to bloom.

This is one way to fight the Hun.

No wheat to be used in manufacturing for anything but food.

Cut down the consumption of wheat by at least one half.

WOMEN'S RESERVES CALLED TO COLORS

In Garden and Kitchen They Must Back Up the Fighters in the First Line.

In this great crisis of the world's history it is necessary that women live greatly. At the battle front they have performed prodigies of valor and have been decorated with the Cross of War for heroism under fire. The American woman, too, would like to drive an ambulance and bring out the wounded under shell fire; but the work behind the lines is even more important. It is not the single act of heroism that will win the fight, but the steady sticking to the job.

It is not a new task to which the woman is called, but the age-old task of feeding the family. Like the tribal women of old, we have sent forth our men and children to war, and we must take up the great first task of feeding for the family. But unlike that tribal woman, whose horizon was bounded by the tribal hunting ground, our horizon is the world. Our family that must be fed is made up of the great nations whose armies united under a single leader are facing the enemy. For those women who have eyes to see this is the coming back into a lost kingdom.

This year's campaign is a struggle of reserve against reserve; America is the last reserve; in overwhelming numbers our forces are being moved to the front; and behind the lines the women are asked to bring up their last reserves of energy and intelligence in the practical carrying out of food orders.

The food situation must steadily degenerate as long as the war lasts. It is therefore of prime importance to add every item to the total production. No woman with a foot of growing space at her disposal can afford to be merely a destroyer of rations, a dependent on the food supplies of a starving world. The Allied nations look to America for food. One object of the Food Administration is to bring as much food as possible under control and distribute these supplies where they are most needed.

America is today the careful guardian of the needs of the world. As the Food Administration anxiously counts the dwindling bushels of wheat, it asks of every woman, "To what extent can you make your home independent of this common store?"

How many potatoes and how many beans will you need? How many jars of tomatoes and how many of peaches? Sit down with pencil and paper and make a definite plan, remembering that every woman's real war work is to make the home pantry as independent as possible of the world pantry. Take stock of what you used during the winter and of what you have left on hand. Make an estimate of your grocery orders for the past winter and plan this year to reduce these to a minimum by substituting your own products. For instance, for sugar, substitute sorghum syrup and honey if they are available; for candy, home-made crystallized fruits and fruit pastes; for raisins, dried cherries; for tropical fruits, native fruits; for Brazil nuts, walnuts and hickory nuts; for canned meats, home canned meats; for shipped breadstuffs, neighborhood meals and flours.

To sum it all up—stop eating freight. Transportation is the greatest problem of the war and shipping space the most precious thing in all the world. Above all, don't eat from the pantry of the hungry Allies. With a little planning and much hard work you can fill your pantry with home-grown foods.

Now is the hour of our testing. Let us make it the hour of our victory—victory over ourselves; victory over the enemy of freedom—Home Card, 1918.

Good value is certain here

At a time like this, when you expect every dollar to do its duty, it's worth a lot to you to have a store like this where you can be absolutely certain of value. If you don't get all the satisfaction that you think you ought to get out of the clothes, you get your money back.

Lively styles for young men

They're here in the new military models by Hart Schaffner & Marx; 5-seam backs; seams at the waistline; military pockets and military fronts; just the things that men in "prep" school, high school and college want.

To the Third district draft board of York county went the honor on Saturday of having furnished the largest number of men on any single shipment to national army camps from Pennsylvania, when 181 selected men were forwarded to Camp Meade. Fifty-six of this number are Hanover residents. Three of the selected men were sent for other draft boards, leaving 178 to go from the Third district list of registrants. There now remain but 70 men in class 1 in the Third district.

Maurice Dubbs, York, was arrested by the police of Hagerstown, on Wednesday. He is charged with having attempted to desert 6 weeks-old son, Justice of the Peace Bitner, of that city, held Dubbs for a hearing. Upon arrival in Hagerstown, Dubbs called Patrolman Baughman and told him to see what he had found. The child was sleeping in an open suitcase on rear seat of Dubbs' machine. Dubbs told the policeman that he had found the child along the road near Waynesboro. He told conflicting stories and later admitted that he was the father of the child and that he wished to get rid of the babe because his wife had left him a short time after its birth. Wednesday he left York, stating that he intended to take the child to a sister in Hanover.

The Benefits From Tonall Long After The Price Is Forgotten.

John Houtz, residing at 1017 Church street, Lebanon, Pa., tells the public in this statement the great relief he got from the use of one bottle of Tonall.

"I suffered from gas on the stomach. I took one bottle and gained immediate relief, and now I can rest at night with ease."

I worked at the Lebanon Boiler Works and Tonall was recommended to me for ailments, and I am glad to recommend Tonall to the suffering public, and to say that the joys of good health are remembered long after the cost of Tonall is forgotten."

This testimony was given May 11, 1918. Tonall is sold at Auker's Drug Store, New Oxford, Pa.

PROBLEM IS SOLVED; SMALL SACRIFICE REQUIRED

Consumer Assured of Stocks For Preserving—Should Cut
Table Use One-Quarter—Manufacturers Provided For.

The patriotic Pennsylvanian will join hands with Mr. Hoover and Mr. Heinz in their effort to save sugar, in order that our allies in Europe may be supplied with that very necessary article of diet. After all, the task set for the consumer is not a heavy one. "Cut your use of sugar about one-quarter," said Howard Heinz, U. S. Food Administrator for Pennsylvania, to an audience of Philadelphia housewives a few days ago. Surely not an onerous requirement.

To the manufacturer of certain products containing sugar the Food Administration says:

"Limit your use of sugar to 80 per cent of normal," and even to this rule there are exceptions in favor of manufacturers who produce such necessities as fruit and vegetable preserves, catsup, chili sauce, canned milk, jams, jellies, ice cream, molasses, apple butter, honey, and meat preparations in which sugar is used for preservation.

For the housewife who desires to lay away preserved or canned food supplies against the future, special dispensations have been made. A simple system of sugar certificates enable her to obtain sugar in 25-pound lots from her regular grocer for such purposes, as well as the usual supply for current table and cookery use, in lots of 2 to 5 pounds at a purchase for residents of towns and cities and in 5 to 10 pound lots for country dwellers. To obtain these small current supplies no certificate is required.

There is plenty of sugar in Cuba and Hawaii, but enough ships to transport it all cannot be had, but your Uncle Sam has arranged to give the American public 80 per cent of the usual amount and that's enough. Just "do your bit" in this sugar matter—the little bit the government asks of you—and the problem will be solved. Save a teaspoonful here and a tablespoonful there, and help to whip the Hun.

USE A LITTLE LESS MEAT IN YOUR DIET

Reasonable Reduction of Consumption Necessary to Aid in Supplying Our Allies.

While the Englishman has been limited to two pounds per week of any kind of meat, the dweller in the good old Keystone State has been permitted for the last two months to "eat his head off" if he felt like it. Now poor old John Bull must pull his belt a little tighter still, for his weekly ration has been cut to less than a pound a week of such flesh as beef and other "butchers' meat," and a small additional quantity of bacon, fowl, rabbit, venison or horseflesh.

Pretty tough for John; for you will remember that he has always been a heavy meat eater, and the "roast beef of old England" is famous around the world. But John Bull is at war and we are fighting with him, shoulder to shoulder. In the matter of food, we are better off than he; it is our good fortune, not our right, in this world crisis. We would have no real cause to complain if we were compelled to take pot-luck with him. How much less cause, therefore, for any American to quibble or whine when the Food Administration asks him to cut down his consumption of meat a little—just reasonably—to meet the demand for shipment abroad to hungry John, who right now has mighty little of his favorite food and who, as our ally in arms and messmate, is entitled to this slight consideration?

Meat once a day is enough for most of us. Smaller portions and less "heavy feeding" would make most men and women healthier, wealthier and happier. In this country right now the supplies of other food than wheat, meat and sugar are greater than ever before in history. Utilize this condition of abundance to aid our Allies and save the world from the domination of the Hun.

FOOD CONTROL RESTRICTIONS

One thing that people are beginning to recognize is that the Food Administration will be just as ready to raise the restrictions upon the consumption of food when conditions warrant as it was vigorous in applying them. The Food Administration is a war agency. It is not an agency for correcting the habits of the American people, or for reforming American economic practices. It is co-operating with the American people to help them to win the war. AMERICAN GROCER.

Battles in Kitchens.

The most momentous battles of the "Great War" will be fought and won in American kitchens. The American woman has in her keeping the destiny of the world and will fight the decisive conflict for a free earth. In her kitchen with no other uniform than the kitchen apron and surrounded by her little ones she will "go over the top" to victory.

Barberry is a Hun—Kill It.
The tall barberry is an enemy of the United States, because it is an enemy of wheat. Wheat rust is spread with the pollen from the barberry flower. It is out the barberry by the roots before it has time to bloom. This is one way to fight the Hun.

No wheat to be used in manufacturing for anything but food.

Cut down the consumption of wheat by at least one-half.

WOMEN'S RESERVES CALLED TO COLORS

In Garden and Kitchen They Must Back Up the Fighters in the First Line.

In this great crisis of the world's history it is necessary that women live greatly. At the battle front they have performed prodigies of valor and have been decorated with the Cross of War for heroism under fire. The American woman, too, would like to drive an ambulance and bring out the wounded under shell fire; but the work behind the lines is even more important. It is not the single act of heroism that will win the fight, but the steady sticking to the job.

It is not a new task to which the woman is called, but the age-old task of feeding the family. Like the tribal women of old, we have sent forth our men and children to war, and we must take up the great first task of feeding for the family. But unlike that tribal woman, whose horizon was bounded by the tribal hunting ground, our horizon is the world. Our family that must be fed is made up of the great nations whose armies united under a single leader are facing the enemy. For those women who have eyes to see this is the coming back into a lost kingdom.

This year's campaign is a struggle of reserve against reserve; America is the last reserve; in overwhelming numbers our forces are being moved to the front; and behind the lines the women are asked to bring up their last reserves of energy and intelligence in the practical carrying out of food orders.

The food situation must steadily degenerate as long as the war lasts. It is therefore of prime importance to add every item to the total production. No woman with a foot of growing space at her disposal can afford to be merely a destroyer of rations, a dependent on the food supplies of a starving world. The Allied nations look to America for food. One object of the Food Administration is to bring as much food as possible under control and distribute these supplies where they are most needed.

America is today the careful guardian of the needs of the world. As the Food Administration anxiously counts the dwindling bushels of wheat, it asks of every woman, "To what extent can you make your home independent of this common store?"

How many potatoes and how many beans will you need? How many jars of tomatoes and how many of peaches? Sit down with pencil and paper and make a definite plan, remembering that every woman's real war work is to make the home pantry as independent as possible of the world pantry. Take stock of what you used during the winter and of what you have left on hand. Make an estimate of your grocery orders for the past winter and plan this year to reduce these to a minimum by substituting your own products. For instance, for sugar, substitute sorghum syrup and honey if they are available; for candy, home-made crystallized fruits and fruit pastes; for raisins, dried cherries; for tropical fruits, native fruits; for Brazil nuts, walnuts and hickory nuts; for canned meats, home canned meats; for shipped breadstuffs, neighborhood meals and flours.

To sum it all up—stop eating freight. Transportation is the greatest problem of the war and shipping space the most precious thing in all the world. Above all, don't eat from the pantry of the hungry Allies. With a little planning and much hard work you can fill your pantry with home-grown foods.

Now is the hour of our testing. Let us make it the hour of our victory—victory over ourselves; victory over the enemy of freedom.—Home Card, 1918.

To the Third district draft board of York county went the honor on Saturday of having furnished the largest number of men on any single shipment to national army camps from Pennsylvania, when 181 selected men were forwarded to Camp Meade. Fifty-six of this number are Hanover residents. Three of the selected men were sent for other draft boards, leaving 178 to go from the Third district list of registrants. There now remain but 70 men in class 1 in the Third district.

Maurice Dubbs, York, was arrested by the police of Hagerstown, on Wednesday. He is charged with having attempted to desert 6 weeks-old son, Justice of the Peace Bitner, of that city, held Dubbs for a hearing. Upon arrival in Hagerstown, Dubbs called Patrolman Baughman and told him to see what he had found. The child was sleeping in an open suitcase on rear seat of Dubbs' machine. Dubbs told the policeman that he had found the child along the road near Waynesboro. He told conflicting stories and later admitted that he was the father of the child and that he wished to get rid of the babe because his wife had left him a short time after its birth. Wednesday he left York, stating that he intended to take the child to a sister in Hanover.

Both Ends (Producer and Consumer) Against The Middle (The Packer)

The consumer wants to pay a low price for meat.

The farmer wants to get a high price for cattle.

The packer stands between these conflicting demands, and finds it impossible to completely satisfy both.

The packer has no control over the prices of live stock or meat, and the most that can be expected of him is that he keep the difference between the two as low as possible. He does this successfully by converting animals into meat and distributing the meat at a minimum of expense, and at a profit too small to be noticeable in the farmer's returns for live stock or in the meat bill of the consumer.

Swift & Company's 1917 transactions in Cattle were as follows:

	Average Per Head
Sold Meat to Retailer for	$68.97
Sold By-products for	24.09
Total Receipts	93.06
Paid to Cattle Raiser	84.45
Balance (not paid to Cattle Raiser)	8.61
Paid for labor and expenses at Packing House, Freight on Meat, and Cost of operating Branch distributing houses	7.32
Remaining in Packer's hands as Returns on investment	$ 1.29

The net profit was $1.29 per head, or about one-fourth of a cent per pound of beef.

By what other method can the difference between cattle prices and beef prices be made smaller, and how can the conflicting demands of producer and consumer be better satisfied?

The Mother's View.
"Are you sure that young man is the sort you want to marry?"
"Yes, mother. Why do you ask?"

ON GUARD

At this time of the year people feel weak, tired, listless, their blood is thin, they have lived indoors and perhaps expended all their mental and bodily energy and they want to know how to renew their energy and stamina, overcome headaches and backaches, have clear eyes, a smooth, ruddy skin, and feel the exhilaration of real good health tugging thru their body. Good, pure, rich, red blood is the best insurance against all of these ailments. Almost all diseases come from impure and impoverished blood. It is to be noticed in the pale or pimply face, the tired, haggard appearance or the listless manner.

Drink hot water a half hour before meals, and for a vegetable tonic there's nothing better than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the old-fashioned herbal remedy, which has had such a fine reputation for fifty years. It contains no alcohol or narcotics. It is made from Golden Seal root, Blood-root, Oregon grape root, Queen's root, Black Cherry bark, extracted with glycerine and made into tablets and liquid. Tablets sixty cents, at most drug stores. In order to insure pure blood and to build up the system try this tonic known as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Get it now!

REALLY SEEMED ONLY WAY

Smith's Idea Was Bright Enough if the Horse Would Only Do His Part in the Game.

John Smith bought a horse. The first Sunday after the purchase he and his bosom pal harnessed the horse to a trap and went into the country on a fishing trip. At the shore of the lake they unharnessed the horse, and let it loose while they fished.

Presently the sun began to go down, and Smith and pal decided to get ready for the return journey. They caught the horse, and Smith began to harness it. But here they met a difficulty. The horse wouldn't open its mouth for the bit.

They tried every means they could think of, but still the stubborn animal stood with closed mouth, placidly watching them.

At last Smith sat on the ground and began to tell jokes—horrible, mathematical jokes, that Adam would have thought chestnuts.

"What on earth are you doing?" asked Smith's pal.

"Trying to get the least to yawn," said Smith.

"The Bantams," he replied.

"How many did you get?" was the next query.

"Oh," he said with a little sigh of weariness. "I recruited 500 bantams and one rooster!"—Canadian.

Killed In Big Explosion.

Relatives in the county on Thursday night received word that all hope had been abandoned of finding the body of George W. Bell, formerly of Adams county. Mr. Bell was killed in the explosion of the T. N. T. plant of the Aetna Chemical Company, near Pittsburgh, last Saturday. For several days search was made of the morgue and other places in an effort to get some trace of the missing man but now it is believed that the remains will never be found. The letter came from Dr. Harry J. Bell, of Dawson, a brother of the dead man. Dr. Bell went to Pittsburgh immediately after he received word of the explosion and learned there from his brother's foreman that he, the brother, had been seen in the cooper shop immediately following the first explosion. This shop adjoined the T. N. T. building and was blown to atoms in a second explosion. Dr. Bell states that in the morgue he saw many of them so badly burned and disfigured as to be utterly beyond any hope of recognition. Either his brother was among these or else the body was blown to bits as was the case with many of the unfortunate employees. George W. Bell was about 45 years old and unmarried. He was born at Bell's Mill, near Arcadia, but the greater part of his life was spent in and about McKnightstown. He served the rural mail route there for many years. His father was William Bell, a veteran of the Civil War. He died some years ago and the mother and son went to Pittsburgh five or six years ago and had since been residing there. Car Overturned.

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Durham and son, all of New York City, were thrown from their touring car on the Lincoln Highway, several miles east of Gettysburg, on Friday morning when the machine was struck by a light trolley and overturned. The accident occurred near the residence of E. K. McClellan and Mrs. Durham was taken into the house where she was given first aid until a physician attended her. The Durhams were going toward Gettysburg and were overtaken by a York car which was going around them when a third car, coming toward New Oxford, also tried to pass. The York man found that he was caught and he could not avoid striking one or other of the two cars. It was the New York machine that got the blow. It was pushed over to the side of the road where it turned over, throwing out the occupants. No one was seriously hurt but Mrs. Durham had some painful bruises. The Durham car has a broken axle and some other damage which will require rather extensive repairs.

TRADING BITES SPREADS DISEASE

"Please give me a bite."
"All right, just one."
"Well, don't be a stingy; save me the core."
"There isn't going to be a core."

This dialogue is rehearsed with variations in practically every schoolhouse almost every day. The habit of trading bites and lunches is well-nigh universal with schoolchildren. It is fraught with danger, however, in a great many instances and they should be instructed to divide their good things in such a way that there is no danger.

The apparently mild case of sore throat, or one that has not grown to be sufficiently severe to bring it to the attention of the parents or teachers, may forecast diphtheria or something as serious. This is one of the ways in which it can readily be transmitted and spread through school with alarming rapidity. The children themselves are quick enough to learn if their teachers will point this out.

Dr. Samuel G. Dixon states that the statistics of the State Department of Health show that certain communicable diseases increase with astonishing rapidity with the opening of school in the fall and continue until the schools close. This is, to a certain extent, due to failure to observe such precautions as that above mentioned. Teach your children for their own safety and that of their playmates. Proper instructions will save much suffering and thousands of lives.

ROCKS HIGH TOWER BY HAND.

California University's Campanile Oscillates Under Man's Pressure.

Berkeley, Cal.—Elmer E. Hall, associate professor of physics of the University of California, stood at the foot of the 300 foot campanile on the campus and with one hand shook the giant structure.

Professor Hall has seismograph records, photographs and a lot of data to prove that he moved the huge granite needle and is prepared to lecture to his students as to how the trick is done. He says:

"I placed a delicate seismograph like those used to record earthquakes on the top of the tower. Then I went down to the ground and about once in a second pushed my hand against the granite shaft. By applying this pressure in time with the natural period of vibration of the campanile I set the whole mass in motion so that its vibrations were clearly recorded by the seismograph."

The campanile is regarded as a masterpiece of earthquake resistive construction.

TREATS SON FOR RABIES.

Paterson Physician Rushed to Parent In Chicago For Aid.

Paterson, N. J.—Believing he was developing symptoms of hydrophobia, Dr. Francois was of 75 East Eighteenth street, Paterson, widely known for his treatment of hydrophobia cases, left for Chicago, where he is being treated for prevention of the dreaded disease by his father, Dr. Juan Was, an eminent physician and surgeon of that city.

Whether Dr. Was became infected while attending patients or through a laceration of his right leg by a dog which bit him while he was on a call at Fairlawn several weeks ago is a matter of conjecture. The dog attacked his sister, Miss Huberdyn Was, who accompanied him. The physician saved her, but was himself bitten.

CORPSE SPOKE TO THEM.

"Say! What Do You Want?" Supposed Dead Person Demanded.

Omaha, Neb.—Coroner's assistants were preparing to place Sam Larson in the "dead basket" and carry him away to the undertaking parlors. A telephone report had informed the officials that Sam was dead. Suddenly the "corpse" stirred and then sat up.

"Say, what do you fellows want?" "He" demanded in an aggrieved tone.

Sam was sent to the charity organization instead of to the undertaker's. When nothing was seen of Sam, who is seventy-five years old, for several days an investigation was made. He was found unconscious, and it was believed that he was dead.

NEW GROUNDHOG YARN.

Did Not Re-enter Hole Because It Was Frozen to Death.

Norwich, Conn.—Byron P. Fox, an Uncasville farmer, appeared in Norwich recently with a story that may go to show why Mr. Groundhog failed so miserably as a weather prognosticator this year. According to Mr. Fox, who admitted that until recently his confidence had never been shaken in the groundhog prophecy, a fine specimen of the woodchuck was found frozen to death near Glasbrenner's livery and garage in Uncasville recently.

"It must have been layin' near the road there for over a week," said Mr. Fox. "Cose, it didn't see its shadow the day it came out, and I suppose the critter was too blamed proud to crawl back afterward. Anyhow, it stayed out and was frozen. No wonder we've freezin' weather."

Does Reading send you to sleep?

If it does, don't blame the story, don't condemn the type or the printing, don't imagine you've weak eyes, for the fault is probably with your lamp. And it's a fault that is easily remedied—all that's needed is a Rayo Lamp. By its clear, steady, white light you can read on and on, get the full pleasure out of reading and without a trace of eye strain. But to get the most and best light from a Rayo Lamp, use

ATLANTIC Rayolight OIL

Combined they give the finest light money can buy, an economical light, too, ideal for reading, sewing or playing. Your dealer can show you a Rayo Lamp specially designed for parlor, sitting room or kitchen, from $1.50 up. And each of these rooms needs one—Rayo Lamps are easily cleaned and last a lifetime.

As for Atlantic Rayolight Oil, it is the one kerosene that burns in lamp, stove or heater without smoke or smell—gives a great volume of clear, white light, and an intense yet cheap heat.

And, do you know, thousands of clever housewives have told us they just can't get along without Atlantic Rayolight Oil for polishing furniture, washing windows, keeping lice off chickens, cleaning painted woodwork, etc., but mind you, for these purposes ordinary kerosene won't do them—they must have Atlantic Rayolight Oil. Ask for it by name—costs no more than the unknown kind. The dealer who displays this sign can always supply you. It's wise to get it by the barrel.

Injured At Moving Building.

Joseph H. Sheely, Lincoln Way, East, and Clinton A. Cashman, Lincoln Way, West, contractors and builders, were injured in an accident on Saturday morning, and at the same time had narrow escapes from being crushed to the earth under a building. The two men were engaged at moving a frame shed at the Livingston shoe factory, North Water street, to a new location. The building had been raised from its foundation and while Mr. Sheely, was engaged at digging a post hole with a crowbar, the building, without the least warning toppled over, a post catching the man's right arm between the shoulder and elbow on the top of the digging iron, where he was held a prisoner until assistance arrived and he was released. Fortunately the bone of the arm was not broken, but the muscles and flesh were bruised in a very painful manner, and he will not be able to use the arm for sometime. Mr. Sheely also sustained other minor injuries. Mr. Cashman was also caught and sustained a badly injured leg, besides numerous scars and bruises about the body, head and arms. Had the building got a bit more force in its downward course, it most likely would have crushed both men beneath its weight.

Band, of Hanover. After the exercises a festival was held for the benefit of the Red Cross, at which $135 was realized, while $65 was collected during the evening for the same purpose, making a grand total of $200.

Wheel Of Buggy Smashed.

The Rev. Luther Stauffer, wife and two children, of New Chester, had a narrow escape from injury in a runaway accident on Friday evening. The Rev. Mr. Stauffer with his family had drove to town in a falling top buggy and were stopping in front of the Lutheran parsonage on Lincoln Way, East, when C. G. Sheely attempted to crank his auto, close by, which frightened the horse and he started to run. In making a short turn on the street the left front wheel of the vehicle was completely demolished, but Mr. Sheely, fortunately, caught the animal before he got a full start. None of the occupants were thrown from the buggy. Mr. Stauffer had just gotten into the buggy and had not received the reins when the animal started.

Met Death In Shale Quarry.

Emory Walters, 22 years old, single, of Hanover, met an untimely death in one of the shale quarries at the Alwine brick plant at Berlin Junction, at 12:30 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, when he sank to the bottom of about 15 feet of water. Walters together with R. F. Crowl and Jacob Shuman, all three trackmen employed by the Western Maryland railway, went bathing in the hole. Neither of the men could swim. Walters had just previously eaten a hearty dinner and finished up with a pint of ice cream. His companions attracted by a cry, saw Walters disappear beneath the water, which was about 15 feet deep. Crowl went to his rescue but being unable to swim could not save him. He managed to get hold of Walters who struggled from his grasp and disappeared for the last time. The body was recovered 33 minutes later by Addison Stambaugh and Emory Alwine, employees of the brick plant, who dived to the bottom of the pond and brought it up. Dr. Geo. H. Seaks, of town, the railroad company physician, was summoned, and upon his arrival thought there were still hopes of reviving the young man, and efforts to this end were made, but in vain. It was claimed that death was due to suffocation, caused by cramps, as but very little water was found in the lungs. The unfortunate young man was a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Walters, of Hanover. He was a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Hoekensmith of Berlin Junction, the former an employee of the brick plant, witnessed the accident.

The deceased is survived by his father, stepmother, two sisters, Gertrude and Jennie, at home, and one brother, Edward, of York Road station. Two step-brothers, Charles and Earl Walters, and one step-sister, Mary Walters, at home, also survive.

The latter car came up from the rear, and when the two got side by side, a race ensued, but before proceeding very far at full speed, the two machines collided. The front axle on Miss Staub's car was bent and the engine put out of commission and had to be towed to the Bonneauville garage for repairs; the occupant escaping injury. The other machine was turned upside down and the occupants pinned beneath. The windshield was knocked across a fence into an adjoining field, while the top was crushed and other damage done. Assistance soon arrived and the men taken from under the car. Eiker sustained a badly cut arm, cuts and bruises about head and face, etc., his companion escaped with less serious injury.

Littlestown Man Is Shot to Death.

Harry King, son of Mrs. Ezra Shoemaker, of Littlestown, was shot and killed last Sunday night in New Haven, Conn. Details of the tragedy are lacking but it is claimed that King was paying attention to the divorced wife of a cigarmaker named Pride, who shot him. He was 39 years old. It is said that King was shot twice and died while being rushed to a hospital.

His body was brought to Littlestown, arriving at that place at 9:01 o'clock on Thursday morning. Interment was made in Mt. Carmel cemetery.

After fighting his conscience since Sunday night, May 19th, when he shot and killed Harry King, of Littlestown, his intimate friend at New Haven, Conn., Terrence J. Harvey, 30 years old, has broken down and confessed that he fired the shot that killed King and that Arthur Pride, who had been jailed charged with the murder, was not the guilty man. Pride was arrested shortly after the murder and from the first declared he was not guilty. The murder followed a quarrel at Mrs. Pride's home in which her husband, King and herself figured. It is thought that Harvey mistook King for Pride, when he entered the room and shot him in mistake for his former brother-in-law.

Killed In Big Explosion.

Relatives in the county on Thursday night received word that all hope had been abandoned of finding the body of George W. Bell, formerly of Adams county. Mr. Bell was killed in the explosion of the T. N. T. plant of the Aetna Chemical Company, near Pittsburgh, last Saturday. For several days search was made of the morgue and other places in an effort to get some trace of the missing man but now it is believed that the remains will never be found. The letter came from Dr. Harry J. Bell, of Dawson, a brother of the dead man. Dr. Bell went to Pittsburgh immediately after he received word of the explosion and learned there from his brothers' foreman that he, the brother, had been seen in the cooper shop immediately following the first explosion. This shop adjoined the T. N. T. building and was blown to atoms in a second explosion. Dr. Bell states that in the morgue he saw many of them so badly burned and disfigured as to be utterly beyond any hope of recognition. Either his brother was among these or else the body was blown to bits as was the case with many of the unfortunate employees. George W. Bell was about 45 years old and unmarried. He was born at Bell's Mill, near Arendtsville, but the greater part of his life was spent in and about McKnightstown. He served the rural mail route there for many years. His father was William Bell, a veteran of the Civil War. He died some years ago and the mother and son went to Pittsburgh five or six years ago and had since been residing there. He leaves his mother, one brother and one sister, Dr. Harry J. Bell, of Dawson, and Mrs. Grace Bell King, a widow, residing with the mother in Pittsburgh.

The Durhams were going toward Gettysburg and were overtaken by a York car which was going around them when a third car, coming toward New Oxford, also tried to pass. The York man found that he was caught and he could not avoid striking one or other of the two cars. It was the New York machine that got the blow. It was pushed over to the side of the road where it turned over, throwing out the occupants. No one was seriously hurt but Mrs. Durham had some painful bruises. The Durham car has a broken axle and some other damage which will require rather extensive repairs.

Injured At Moving Building.

Joseph H. Sheely, Lincoln Way, East, and Clinton A. Cashman, Lincoln Way, West, contractors and builders, were injured in an accident on Saturday morning, and at the same time had narrow escapes from being crushed to the earth under a building. The two men were engaged at moving a frame shed at the Livingston shoe factory, North Water street, to a new location. The building had been raised from its foundation and while Mr. Sheely, was engaged at digging a post hole with a crowbar, the building, without the least warning toppled over, a post catching the man's right arm between the shoulder and elbow on the top of the digging iron, where he was held a prisoner until assistance arrived and he was released. Fortunately the bone of the arm was not broken, but the muscles and flesh were bruised in a very painful manner, and he will not be able to use the arm for some time. Mr. Sheely also sustained other minor injuries. Mr. Cashman was also caught and sustained a badly injured leg, besides numerous scars and bruises about the body, head and arms. Had the building got a bit more force in its downward course, it most likely would have crushed both men beneath its weight.

Sheely attempted to crank his auto, close by, which frightened the horse and he started to run. In making a short turn on the street the left front wheel of the vehicle was completely demolished, but Mr. Sheely, fortunately, caught the animal before he got a full start. None of the occupants were thrown from the buggy. Mr. Stauffer had just gotten into the buggy and had not secured the reins when the animal started.

Met Death In Shale Quarry.

Emory Walters, 22 years old, single, of Hanover, met an untimely death in one of the shale quarries at the Alwine brick plant at Berlin Junction, at 12:30 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, when he sank to the bottom of about 15 feet of water. Walters together with R. F. Crowl and Jacob Shuman, all three trackmen employed by the Western Maryland railway, went bathing in the hole. Neither of the men could swim. Walters had just previously eaten a hearty dinner and finished up with a pint of ice cream. His companions attracted by a cry, saw Walters disappear beneath the water, which was about 15 feet deep. Crowl went to his rescue but being unable to swim could not save him. He managed to get hold of Walters who struggled from his grasp and disappeared for the last time. The body was recovered 33 minutes later by Addison Stambaugh and Emory Alwine, employees of the brick plant, who dived to the bottom of the pond and brought it up. Dr. Geo. H. Seaks, of town, the railroad company physician, was summoned, and upon his arrival thought there were still hopes of reviving the young man, and efforts to this end were made, but in vain. It was claimed that death was due to suffocation, caused by cramps, as but very little water was found in the lungs. The unfortunate young man was a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Walters, of Hanover. He was a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Hocken-smith of Berlin Junction, the former an employee of the brick plant, witnessed the accident.

The deceased is survived by his father, stepmother, two sisters, Gertrude and Jennie, at home, and one brother, Edward, of York Road station. Two step-brothers, Charles and Earl Walters, and one step-sister, Mary Walters, at home, also survive.

Two Ford touring cars racing at what is known as Waddletown, on the road leading from Bonneauville to Gettysburg, on their way from Gettysburg to Bonneauville. Miss Anna Staub, of Bonneauville, was the driver and lone occupant of one of the cars, while the other was occupied by a man named Eiker, and a male companion from Gettysburg. The latter car came up from the rear, and when the two got side by side, a race ensued, but before proceeding very far at full speed, the two machines collided. The front axle on Miss Staub's car was bent and the engine put out of commission and had to be towed to the Bonneauville garage for repairs; the occupant escaping injury. The other machine was turned upside down and the occupants pinned beneath. The windshield was knocked across a fence into an adjoining field, while the top was crushed and other damage done. Assistance soon arrived and the men taken from under the car. Eiker sustained a badly cut arm, cuts and bruises about head and face, etc., his companion escaped with less serious injury.

Littlestown Man Is Shot to Death.

Harry King, son of Mrs. Ezra Shoemaker, of Littlestown, was shot and killed last Sunday night in New Haven, Conn. Details of the tragedy are lacking but it is claimed that King was paying attention to the divorced wife of a cigarmaker named Pride, who shot him. He was 30 years old. It is said that King was shot twice and died while being rushed to a hospital.

His body was brought to Littlestown, arriving at that place at 9:01 o'clock on Thursday morning. Interment was made in Mt. Carmel cemetery.

King is survived by his wife and child both of whom reside at the home of Mrs. King's mother, Mrs. Matilda Seigfried, at McSherrystown, and his mother, who resides at Littlestown.

King is also survived by two brothers, Edward and George King, of Littlestown; and four sisters: Mrs. John Aumen, of Baltimore; Mrs. William Bortner, of York Springs; Mrs. Jacob Gross, of York county, and Mrs. Geo. Wondersmith, of McSherrystown.

After fighting his conscience since Sunday night, May 19th, when he shot and killed Harry King, of Littlestown, his intimate friend at New Haven, Conn., Terrence J. Harvey, 30 years old, has broken down and confessed that he fired the shot that killed King and that Arthur Pride, who had been jailed charged with the murder, was not the guilty man. Pride was arrested shortly after the murder and from the first declared he was not guilty. The murder followed a quarrel at Mrs. Pride's home in which her husband, King and herself figured. It is thought that Harvey mistook King for Pride, when he entered the room and shot him in mistake for his former brother-in-law.

Persons not prepared to pass a thorough examination in all of the required subjects should not enter the class.

To Work or Fight.

Every man of draft age must work or fight after July 1 under a drastic amendment to the selective service regulation announced by Provost Marshal General Crowder. Not only idlers but all draft registrants engaged in what are termed non-useful occupations are to be haled before local boards and given their choice of new jobs or the army. Gamblers, track and bucket shop attendants and fortune tellers head the list but which also includes waiters and bartenders, theater ushers, passenger and elevator operators and other attendants of clubs, hotels, stores, etc., and domestic clerks in stores. The regulations may require professional baseball players to work or join the army. Baseball players, as well as jockeys, professional golfers and other professional sportsmen, Crowder said, will be affected by the regulations if strictly enforced. He said that he did not desire to make civic rulings now, only in such cases that came to him from local boards after July 1. Theaters are excepted from the regulations at the direction of Secretary of War Baker who is said to feel that the people cannot do without amusements and that other amusements could be dispensed with more readily. Definite classification on account of dependent was disregarded entirely in applying the rule. They may be at the bottom of class 4 but if he fails in the regulation and refuses useful employment he will be given a full number in class 1, that will send him into military service forthwith. Local boards are to use their discretion where enforcement of the regulation would result in disproportionate hardships on his dependents.

Four suits to recover damages, amounting in all to $13,700, have been filed in the office of the Prothonotary at Carlisle by attorneys for the family of Robert H. Myers, of Penn township, against W. C. Bettilyon, head of the Carlisle Plumbing and Heating Company. The suits are the result of an accident which occurred on March 11, when the two passenger roadster in which Bettilyon and his wife were coming to Carlisle struck the Myers car near Hogestown, overturning it and injuring Mrs. Myers and several other members of the party. It is claimed that Bettilyon was driving at excessive speed.

ROAD TO HAPPINESS—Be amiable, cheerful and good natured and you are much more likely to be happy. You will find this difficult, if not impossible, however, when you are constantly troubled with constipation. Take Chamberlain's Tablets and get rid of that and it will be easy. These tablets not only move the bowels, but improve the appetite and strengthen the digestion.

A large bank barn on the farm of Edw. B. Stoner, of Hallam, located in Lower Windsor township, about a mile north of East Prospect, was struck by lightning during a heavy electrical storm, on Tuesday afternoon and was burned to the ground. The live stock and most of the contents were saved, but a load of hay, which was removed from the burning building, became ignited and was consumed along with the wagon. With the hay wagon were burned a manure spreader and mowing machine.

BEST REMEDY FOR WHOOPING COUGH—"Last winter when my little boy had the whooping cough I gave him Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," writes Mrs. J. B. Roberts, East St. Louis, Ill. "It kept his cough loose and relieved him of those dreadful coughing spells. It is the only cough medicine I keep in the house because I have the most confidence in it. This remedy is also good for colds and croup."

Machine Signs Five Checks at Once

The tremendous clerical burden of the war has multiplied the number of labor-saving devices employed by the United States government. The check-signing machine, operated in this picture by J. L. Summers, disbursing clerk of the treasury, is used extensively in bureaus where the writing of five signatures by one operation is saving time and money.

Eat More Rice

Nutritious Food That is a Good Substitute for Wheat

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Here in the United States it is difficult to realize that there is no other edible product, except perhaps meat, upon which more people in the world are dependent for food than rice, and that we might advantageously consume much greater quantities of this nutritious food and grow the increase in our own rice fields. An increased production and consumption not only would expand a profitable industry, but the eating of more rice in the place of wheat would release a greater quantity of the bread grain for shipment to the allies.

The average per capita consumption of rice for food in this country is scarcely 6 pounds a year, and most of this is consumed in the Southern states. The high esteem in which rice is held in other countries is indicated by their per capita consumption. Norway and Sweden consume over 9 pounds per capita; Russia over 11 pounds; England, 27 pounds; France, 34 pounds; Italy, over 101 pounds, and Germany more than 93 pounds. But even these European countries do not begin to eat as much rice as Japan and China. There, rice is the most important article of diet. Each man, woman and child in Japan, on the average, consumes 147 pounds of rice each year, and those in China, 168 pounds.

The placing of such dependence upon rice as a staple food certainly proves beyond a doubt that it is highly nutritious; analysis of rice supports this proof. Pound for pound rice is about as nutritious as wheat. Every 100 pounds of cleaned rice contains 87.7 pounds of nutriment, of which 8 pounds are protein, 0.3 pound fat, 79 pounds carbohydrates, and 0.1 pound ash. The analysis of wheat flour shows that it contains 87.1 pounds of nutriment in each 100 pounds, of which 10.8 pounds are protein, 1.1 pounds fat, 74.8 pounds carbohydrates, and 0.1 pound ash. Thus the total nutriment in rice is a trifle greater than in wheat. Wheat has the advantage in protein and rice in carbohydrates.

Although rice is the great foodstuff of the Orient, it is not used there in making a raised bread. In this country dieticians have made excellent bread by substituting as high as 25 per cent of rice for wheat flour, and have obtained a white yeast bread of excellent flavor.

With the Inventors.

A glass bottle blowing machine with a capacity of 2,000 bottles an hour has been invented in Europe.

Electrical apparatus for tapping trees, which can be left without attention for months, has been invented.

Spring pads to be strapped to the knees have been invented for the comfort of persons obliged to kneel at their work. To prevent rubber fire hose cracking in dry air an inventor has patented a reel that keeps it filled with compressed air.

The Concrete Ship.

Faith, the new concrete ship, has the appearance of a concrete cellar foundation. This may be the very thing some unseen and unknown barnacle has been waiting to do. Our bold experiment will bring out some surprising discoveries, no doubt. If it shows a new way to use cement there will be a boom in cement stocks. We have no end of raw material for cement making and no conservationist can tell us when we shall be shy of the stuff that makes ships if the Faith is a winner.—Brooklyn Eagle.

THE BEST POLICY

Would you win eternal fame
And immortalize your name?
Do you covet praise and self-esteem?
Then give your utmost best—
And do it with a zeal—
To the job that's yours, however small
It seem.
And when you've set your mark on high,
For it's not the thing you do, but how
You do it.

Would you find the pot of gold
With its blessings manifold,
But with it have your conscience free
From blight?

Then cut your wants in half,
Make thrifty your daily staff,
And keep your credit and your honor
Bright.
And when the tempter offers graft, forsake it;
For it's not how much you make, but how you make it.

Would you build your monument
Ere your busy life be spent;
Or would you the applause of men command?

Then purge your soul of greed,
Hear every call of need
And scatter blessings with an open hand.
If money easy comes, do not abuse it,
For it's not how much you save, but how you use it.

Consumption of Sugar Goes Up to 84 Pounds Per Capita Since Revolutionary Period

The American who during the world's greatest war must get along with one lump of sugar instead of two in his coffee will be interested in the fact that the Revolutionary patriots had much less or none at all of the sweetening food material.

A century ago, says the United States department of agriculture, the people of this country consumed less than one-tenth as much sugar as they do now. In 1791-1795, just after the Revolution, the estimated annual consumption was 7.5 pounds per capita. In 1821-1825 the average per capita consumption was 8.3 pounds and was practically the same 20 years earlier. But in the five years ending with 1915 the total consumption in the United States was approximately 8,000,000,000 pounds, a yearly average of about 84 pounds for each person, or 378 pounds for an average family (4.5 persons).

Reasons for the increase can be found not only in many new and extended uses for sugar but also in numerous sources of the product. Domestic cane and beet fields supplied 23 per cent of the sugar we used in 1911-1915; the planters of Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippines furnished 26 per cent; while Cuba, supplemented by small amounts from other foreign countries, furnished 51 per cent. During these five years the sugar consumption of the United States averaged almost 100,000,000 pounds per week. The supply for 27 weeks came from foreign countries, our island possessions furnished supplies for 13 weeks' consumption, while the product of the United States proper was equivalent to 12 weeks' average consumption.

Old Age Cannot Wear Out Its Shoes as Recklessly As Does the Gay Youth

Preparing for easy old age is one of the spurs that has transformed a wholesome ambition into a "vaunting ambition that o'erleaps itself." Many a man has shortened his life overworking to take care of the old age that he thus snuffed out, observes a writer in the Minneapolis Journal. Any man is remiss who does not prepare against old age, but nature has also taken a hand in this preparation.

Old age cannot wear out its shoes as recklessly as does youth. The normal old man finds better entertainment in meditation than he could in expensive amusement. Memory is his "moyie." Society does not ask old people to burn expensive midnight oil nor to appear on dress parade. Thus normal and gratifying reduction of outgo is equivalent to an addition to the income.

Feverish preparation for old age implies the belief not only that the appetite will not decrease with old age, but that old age will be wholly helpless to sustain itself. As a matter of fact, but a small proportion of the old are totally disabled for gainful labor. And few, if any, old people are as happy when idle as when occupied with such work as they are fitted to do.

The wise old man has learned what a foolish young man he failed to see, that "enough is as good as a feast," and that after all "man wants but little here below." Sensible comfort in old age does not come very high.

Government Appeals to Patriotism of Sportsmen.

The United States department of agriculture appeals to the patriotism and true sportsmanship of all persons to co-operate with it in the enforcement of the federal law for the protection of migratory birds, especially at this time when the problem of conserving the food supply is taxing the ingenuity of the world. It is gratifying to know that the majority of sportsmen have observed the federal regulations and this fact has contributed largely to the successful results accomplished. A sense of patriotic duty should impel every one to conserve this natural food asset, thus perpetuating the species and increasing the supply for the benefit of all the people.

The department has planned to increase greatly its force of wardens, who will be actively engaged during the spring migration in securing evidence upon which to base prosecutions against those who carelessly violate the law.

Our Army and What it Costs

Most People Figure Expansion Much Less and Cost Much Greater Than Facts Warrant

Most people understand that the United States army has been tremendously expanded in the year America has been at war. All have seen the army grow, in one sense—they have watched the men go away, have written letters and sent packages to the boys.

Few realize, however, that the army has increased 700 per cent, in round numbers, in that one year. Official figures from Washington show that it has.

When America entered the war on April 6, 1917, the total strength of all branches of the service (Regular army, National Guard and reserves) was 212,034—9,524 officers and 202,510 men.

On April 6, 1918, the grand total strength of the American army (all branches) was 1,652,725—123,801 officers and 1,528,924 men.

National army	0	0	0	516,839

Total 9,524 202,510 123,801 1,528,924

The cost of the army during the first year of the war is a thing that is generally overestimated. People are prone to think of the billions that have been appropriated instead of the actual amounts that have been expended.

Official figures from Washington show that the total expenditures on the army for the year America has been in the war—including everything from new cantonments to shoe laces and a good many things not properly chargeable to the war—were $3,006,761,907.15.

That sum does not include, of course, the obligations of the war department—contracts made for the billions of dollars' worth of supplies that will be furnished this year; it is the sum actually paid out for materials already delivered and pay of the men for the time they have already served. There are included river and harbor and civil establishment expenditures that would have been made had there been no war. The detailed official figures of war department appropriations and expenditures for the year are as follows:

Civil establishment	$ 16,205,143.00
Military establishment	7,413,835,463.48
Rivers and harbors	84,731,150.00

Total $7,404,771,756.48

Withdrawals from the treasury have been made under these appropriations during the period from June 15, 1917, to March 9, 1918, as follows:

Civil establishment	$ 6,517,918.70
Military establishment	2,801,606,885.85
Rivers and harbors	18,637,102.60

$3,006,761,907.15

Manager George Stallings Is in the Game Heart and Soul on the Ball Diamond

Fred Mitchell, manager of the Chicago Cubs, delights to tell stories of his former boss, Miracle Man Stallings of the Braves. When Mitch was Stallings' assistant in Boston he had many a run-in with the manager, and he admits now that Stallings thinks more of a man who will answer him back on occasion.

Stallings is a firebrand in baseball; never laughs, rarely smiles, doesn't jest, and roasts the daylight out of a man who makes a slip. He is also a nervous person, and becomes enraptured on the bench while he is watching a game, and plays the whole contest over, solo, as he sits on the players' coop.

Stallings is merciless in calling down a player and criticizing his work. "A fellow made a bubble once while Stallings was watching from the bench," said Mitchell. "Look at that boob," said Stallings. "What a bonehead! No, he isn't a bonehead; his head is made of Krupp steel."

Another German Atrocity.

Weird and wonderful are the mixtures that pass as tobacco in Germany now that the government has decreed that anything is tobacco that contains not less than 5 per cent of that weed. The rest may be dried leaves of beech, cherry, chicory, hops, beetroot, sorrel, potato, rhubarb or coltsfoot. One German writer says that the result is "a rank offense, it smells to heaven." Cigars made from this "tobacco" go by the appropriate popular name of "Infamia Scandalosa."

England to Grow Sunflowers.

The production of sunflowers is being encouraged in England. The ministry of food and production department has issued instructions on how to grow sunflowers and advises all persons to grow them, explaining that the seed is rich in oil and makes an excellent chicken food.

PLAN AHEAD FOR BETTER POULTRY

One must plan ahead in order to be successful in any line of endeavor. Poultry keeping is no exception, writes an authority. If you do not have the breeding birds you need for the season of 1918, now is a good time to get them. There is a country-wide scarcity of good birds for breeding purposes, and one must expect to pay somewhat higher prices than in past years. It will not pay to get inferior birds in order to save a little of the purchase price.

If you are just starting, or if you want new blood, you can buy either stock or eggs for hatching. Men are more likely to buy stock because they do not usually handle eggs so carefully as women and also because usually they have more money to spend. To buy stock is the safer plan, of course, and on the whole is better, but it costs more money. For both stock and eggs prices are high and will continue so. One cannot expect to buy eggs for hatching in 1918 in quantities, at $5 per hundred. Such low prices are now absurd for eggs from stock of any decent quality at all.

Most poultry breeders, except those who have a large number of birds of superior quality, are compelled to replenish their flock with new blood almost every year. Our flocks either go up or go down. Just because prices are higher than normal we must be careful to get good quality in what we buy. This is a time when poor stuff will not pay. There never was a time when it was so true that "the best is none too good." It does not pay to keep inferior fowls now.

Why They Are Called Tumblers.

About 1,500 years ago the Saxons in England used drinking vessels that were made of horns of cattle or oxen. They were shaped like cones. As their bottoms were pointed they would not stand erect. When a man had his drinking horn filled he disposed of its contents at a single draught and did not lay it down until he had drained it. These horns were tumblers in the sense that they would not stand upright. Although our modern glasses do not have this objectionable quality, the name that originated in early Saxon times still persists.

Twenty Years Ago.

Bicycles were as common as legs. Automobiles and millionaires were rare. Table board was $3 a week, or $5 a week with the "best room in the house." Hotels had a "bill of fare," and the "menu" with prices marked opposite was almost unknown. Appendicitis had just been discovered. Nobody wore white shoes, and palm beach suits were in the "alpaca stage." Jules Verne had a monopoly on the submarine.—Washington Times.

No Established Wheatless Days, but Pound and Half Should Be the Very Limit

The United States food administration has made wheatless days and wheatless meals optional in private homes. But that does not mean the lid has been taken off. It only means that the question of which day or meal shall be wheatless is left to the individual household.

In other words, the food administration has made the reduction of wheat consumption a test of good citizenship. Each citizen in the land is asked, as a good American, to cut his individual wheat consumption to a pound and a half a week. That means to cut the ordinary, peace-time consumption in two. It doesn't matter on what day or what meals that is done, just so it is done. In that regard the food administration says:

"In making optional the observance of wheatless days in private homes the food administration lifted no restrictions upon the consumption of wheat products. It is merely asking the American people to reduce their per capita consumption to not more than 1½ pounds per week."

"This is an absolute military necessity. The method of saving is being left entirely to the individual. If it can be done without foregoing the use of wheat at any specified meal or on any day, the food administration's urgent plea for further conservation will be carried out to the letter."

HAVE A LAUGH

His Temptation.

"I hope my husband won't get involved into any games with those card sharks."

"Oh, he'll know when they are trying to cheat him."

"I'm not afraid of that, but you know, he's a sharpshooter."

A Victim of Fate.

"When I began business," said plutocrat wearily, "I made a solemn vow that when I had made an even million I 'would quit.'"

"But you've made that many times over," said the other man, "and still you are accumulating."

"That's the curse of it. Whenever I think I've made an even million I find on figuring it up it's either a little more or a little less, and I've got to renew the heart-breaking struggle." And the unfortunate man sighed heavily.

Of Course Not.

"Why am I rejected?" asked the applicant for military service.

"Weak heart," replied the examining surgeon.

"Weak heart?" retorted the youth.

"If I had a weak heart do you think I'd want to go into this kind of a war?"

Early Crop.

"So you own a good many suburban houses and small farms. Live on any of them?"

"No."

"Then you don't raise anything yourself."

"Oh, yes; every spring I raise rents."

Mental Industry.

"It's wrong to say I don't work, mister," said Flooding Pete.

"What work do you do?"

"Brain work. I have to think up a terrible lot of excuses for not acceptin' jobs."

A Patriot.

"He's a real patriot, anyhow."

"What makes you think so?"

"He's taken a big government contract for the same profit he'd charge, a private corporation."

An Excusing Spirit.

"Didn't I see the grocer's boy kiss you this morning, Susan?"

"Yes'm. But he ain't to blame, ma'am. 'Twas the iceman set him the bad example."

Up-to-Date.

"Has your cook anything deleterious in your daily diet, Mrs. Concup?"

"Sure, she has. We have everything now that's the style."

How President Kruger Decided Problem for Two Brothers

That very canny person, President Kruger, was once called upon, as King Solomon before him, to pass judgment in a matter of ownership. The case was that of two brothers, who had been left a farm and could not agree as to the division which had to be made. They agreed that, rather than take the matter to the courts, they would let President Kruger decide. President Kruger appears to have hesitated about as little as King Solomon did. He instructed the elder brother to make what he considered a fair division, and then he gave first choice to the younger brother. A solution, like Solomon's, both masterly and simple.—Christian Science Monitor.

NOTICE!

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance, entitled "An Ordinance Regulating the Water Supply, and Water Service in the Borough of New Oxford, Adams County, Penna., Etc." was introduced on the 6th day of May, 1918, for action of Council of the Borough of New Oxford, Adams County, Pa., and that the Council approved the same for publication according to law; and that final action will be taken on said Ordinance on Friday evening June 7th, 1918, at 7:30 o'clock, in the council chamber in the Borough of New Oxford, when and where objections, if any, will be heard and considered.

THOS. E. BOWER,
Secretary of Town Council.

Ordinance

An Ordinance regulating the Water Supply, and Water Service in the Borough of New Oxford, Adams County, Pennsylvania, prescribing Rates for the use thereof, and providing penalties for violation of the Ordinance.

Be it enacted by the Burgess and Town Council of the Borough of New Oxford, Adams County, Pennsylvania, and it is hereby enacted and ordained by the authority of the same, that the following Rules and Regulations, Rates and Penalties, for the supply and use of Water to the Citizens of said Borough, be and are hereby adopted, and approved:

1. The water of the Borough Water Plant shall not be used by any person who shall not first have obtained a permit signed by the Chairman of the Water Committee or some member of said Committee duly authorized and appointed by him, nor for any other purpose than shall be specified in said permit.

2. No attachment shall be made to the main pipe, nor detachment from it, except under the direction and control of the said Water Committee; nor shall any additional attachment be made to any consumer's service pipe for any purpose than that specified in the permit until the same has been entered upon his or her permit.

3. All water rents shall be paid quarterly in advance. Failure to pay the same within 30 days after it is due may be regarded by the Water Committee as notice of a desire to discontinue the use of the water and it may detach the branch or, at its option, compel payment.

4. Any member of the Water Committee shall have the right, at all reasonable times, to enter the premises where water has been introduced, for any purpose connected with the use of the water and the interest of the said borough.

5. It shall be the duty of persons holding a permit to keep their pipes, hydrants and faucets in good repair, so that the water may not be wasted. No consumer will be allowed to supply water to others, except by permission of the Water Committee. If found so doing, he or she will be liable to have the supply stopped and the rent already paid forfeited.

6. In sprinkling yards or lawns, washing pavements or windows, each water taker must confine himself to his own premises. Hose larger than one inch will not be permitted, and sprinkling without a nozzle, or larger opening than one-fourth inch, is forbidden.

7. Water from Fire Hoses shall be used only in case of fire, and at no other time without special authority from the Water Committee, or by Fire Marshall for testing purposes.

8. Any consumer wishing to discontinue the use of Water shall give notice thereof at least 10 days previous to the end of the quarter, otherwise water rent will be charged for the ensuing three months.

9. Any fraudulent misrepresentations in regard to the use of water, or any willful or negligent waste of the same, shall be deemed a cause for forfeiture.

10. Should the supply of water at any time be stopped for any cause, the Borough shall not be held for damages.

11. The Borough reserves the right to restrict the water supply generally or especially, as in its judgment may be found necessary:

12. The box on the inside of the curb line and the stop-cock on the service pipe in the box, shall be under the control of the Borough.

13. No sprinkling of pavements, streets or lawns shall be allowed between the hours of 8 A. M. and 4 P. M.

14. No Tap for building purposes shall be connected with the main pipe unless the party who secures a permit therefor shall agree to use the water in such building when completed, subject to the regulations, and rates under this ordinance.

15. Any person who shall without written permission, open communication with the water main or other service pipe, or turn the water on after it has been turned off by the Borough authorities, or in any wise impair the water supply, or injure the fire hydrants, or meddle with the water supply, service pipes, or fire plugs, shall, upon conviction thereof, be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding $50.00, or undergo imprisonment in the Borough Lock-up for a period not exceeding 30 days.

16. The consumer shall be obliged to lay the pipe from the curb line to the buildings and keep the same in proper repair, at his own expense, but the Water Committee shall have full supervision over the same.

17. A full year's rate will be charged for a permit for a pave wash, or for the sprinkling of streets or lawns, but the consumer shall have the right to make payments thereon, quarterly, in advance; in all other instances, the consumer shall have the right to discontinue the water as provided for in Section 8 of this Ordinance.

18. Any person or persons violating the provisions of this ordinance, or section thereof, so far as same relates to the Rules and Regulations, Rates and Service herein provided, shall forfeit any water rents already paid to the Borough, and the Borough authorities shall have the right to cut off the supply of water from such consumer, and the water service shall not be restored to the parties so offending except by special permit from Council.

19. This ordinance shall go into effect on the 1st day of July, 1918, and permits shall be required from all persons from and after that date.

Mrs. Wm. Decker, a resident of Glen Rock, was found dead Wednesday morning lying on the floor in the kitchen of her home. Death was probably due to heart trouble. Indications showed that Mrs. Decker was stricken while washing the breakfast dishes shortly after her husband had departed for work. The body was found by Mrs. Decker's sister, Miss Frazier.

Gives Advice To Sufferers

Misery Was His Daily Companion Until Master Medicine Came to His Relief.

"I had catarrh of the stomach in its most drastic form," say Henry Fenstermacher, a well known cement worker, of Allentown, Pa.

"This had spread down into my lower bowels and words cannot describe my sufferings.

"I hated to see morning come, for as soon as I got up I would suffer an attack of nausea and there would come a boring pain in my abdomen that would double me up like a jackknife.

"My appetite was good, but I didn't dare to eat, for so sure as I ate even the simplest food there would follow those agonizing pains I also suffered constantly from sick headache.

"I tried remedy after remedy, and I don't know how many prescriptions, but I just kept on getting worse instead of better.

"I had almost lost hope of ever getting well when I began using Tanlac. It was wonderful how quickly it relieved me.

"Now I have been entirely relieved and have no more suffering. Those pains in my stomach have disappeared, my bowels are as regular as clock work, my headaches are gone and I can eat heartily and enjoy every mouthful."

Tanlac, the famous Master Medicine, is now sold here by Ed. T. Anker, druggist—adv.

HIS JOB TO BANDAGE WOUNDED HOUSES

American Boss Carpenter Putting French Villages Back on the Map.

It was a monotonous stretch of ugly trench, wire entanglements, gaping shell holes, accented by the blackened skeleton of shell killed forests silhouetted against a dull, hopeless sky.

This had once been beautiful rolling land like our own Ohio and Indiana—rich in grain fields, orchards and gardens. Now it was desolation—nothing could live there—seemingly nothing did.

We had come on some rising ground, and as we climbed we reached the brow of the slope, and of a sudden it seemed that some giant had suddenly twisted the old world under our feet and we were back home, for of a sudden the sounds of life came up to us out of a hustling center of industry. That satisfying chug of an honest hammer head sinking willing nail into sound wood, and before us was a panorama of new building, with piles of clean lumber stacked here and there, and the framing of many new buildings told where the wood was going. Then we heard the voice of a man who talked real "United States"—telling 27 other carpenters what to do—out in this foreign land thousands of miles from home.

We inquired of the boss as to who he was, and with true sense of humor he said: "I am a Red Cross nurse. My job is bandaging wounded houses."

Putting Villages Back on Map.

"This was once a French village," he went on to say, "in the center of fine sugar beet country. We are living now on the site of the sugar mill," he said, pointing to a long, low barracks, which plainly had been recently built.

"We are working for the American Red Cross—putting villages back on the map. In four more weeks we'll be out of here and on our way to the next ruin, for there are many villages that need us. We go from place to place, always finding that our lumber has reached there first, so we can get right to work, clean up and move on again."

It is just like pioneering, this rebuilding work of our Red Cross—only more important—more important because it is vital to the winning of the war that these people come back to their soil and plant new crops—for future years of war or peace.

And so the tide of war sweeps back from whence it came, a Red Cross army follows close behind in uniforms of overalls, armed with Yankee hammers and nails to coax back the foundations that have been brushed into squalid helplessness in the south and east.

They are coming back home now, just a few days behind these carpenters—back to the beet fields, the gardens and the farms. Soon they will be feeding themselves and thousands of others.

WHITE PLAGUE KILLS MORE MEN THAN BULLETS

It seems longer, but it was less than four years ago that the nations had not yet started in to wipe each other off the map and that the only times when one heard of the Red Cross were times of flood or disaster and at Christmas time, when the peaceful little Red Cross tuberculosis seals made their annual appearance.

Perhaps, in fact, it was the long, ardent fight in America against the White Plague which, in spite of the war's enormous new demands, is responsible for the especial interest being taken by the American Red Cross in France's frightful struggle against consumption.

This scourge seems to mark the trench fighter for its own. It kills more men than do bullets and poison gas combined. Until the American Red Cross was permitted by the French government to start its drive against tuberculosis it looked as if, even with a victory over the Hun, France might eventually be conquered by this deadly foe.

Already things are looking brighter. The Red Cross has taken over old hospitals and built new ones. More than 300 tuberculosis dispensaries are to be opened throughout the country, and Red Cross doctors and nurses—scores of them—are devoting themselves exclusively to this fight, doing over there exactly the same kind of work which is financed in America by the little Christmas seals. It is one of the ways in which by our contributions to the Red Cross America can repay her debt to France.

Let Uncle Sam have the coal

Thousands of tons of coal will be saved this summer in homes that formerly used a kitchen range all during the hot weather. These homes are going to use oil cook stoves so there will be more coal next winter and therefore more for the government. Will your home be one of them? It should be.

NEW PERFECTION OIL COOK-STOVES

will be in the majority of these homes and there should be one in yours. You will not only save coal—you will save money. Kerosene is far cheaper than coal. And with a New Perfection you can have the same good things to eat and with less work, trouble and time. It doesn't heat up the whole kitchen like a coal fire does, either. You can regulate the heat exactly as you want it. No fire to fix. No ashes to bother with. Many good cooks prefer to use a New Perfection the year 'round.

But they get the best results (and you will too) when

ATLANTIC
OIL

they use Atlantic Rayolight Oil instead of ordinary kerosene. The difference is in the quality—the way it is refined and purified. All waste matter is taken out. All the heat-producing elements are left in. Atlantic Rayolight is a superior kerosene yet the price is no more than for the other kinds. There's a dealer near you who sells Atlantic Rayolight Oil. Look for the sign, "Atlantic Rayolight Oil For Sale Here." Decide right now that you will have a New Perfection Oil Cook Stove this summer. Your dealer can show you one now. Go and see it today.

Extra charge for carrying coal is as follows: 2000 lbs., 40 cts.; 1000 lbs., 25 cts.; 500 lbs., 15 cts.

No dealer is allowed to deliver coal to a consumer unless the consumer to whom the coal is to be delivered has first signed the card as provided by the fuel administration. These cards may be signed at the office of any of the dealers and it is urged that all consumers who desire putting in any part of their year's supply during the summer months, sign their cards and place their orders. Signing of the cards does not mean the placing of an order but is simply a statement of the year's requirements, and each consumer who desires to put in coal during the summer should be sure not only that they have signed a card but that they have also placed their order.

Teachers' Examinations For 1918.

The examination of applicants for the schools in Adams county will be held in the Gettysburg High School Assembly Room, as follows:

FOR PROVISIONAL AND PROFESSIONAL CERTIFICATES.

June 14, for all applicants who are not in attendance at school out of the county.

June 28, for all applicants who are in attendance at school out of the county.

July 5, for applicants who wish to renew their Professional Certificates by adding two new subjects and those who have qualified in the subjects enumerated on a Provisional Certificate and are applying for a Professional Certificate.

The examinations will begin at 8:00 a. m. All applicants are requested to signify their intention to be examined by letter or postal card at an early date. Applicants for a Provisional Certificate will be given a thorough test in the following branches: spelling, reading, writing, arithmetic, physiology and hygiene, geography, grammar, U. S. history, Pennsylvania history, civics, elementary algebra, school management and methods of teaching.

Candidates for Professional Certificates will notify the Superintendent in what two additional branches they wish to be examined.

Applicants for a Professional Certificate must pass a thorough examination in all branches required for a Provisional Certificate and two of the following branches: vocal music, drawing, English literature, plane geometry, general history, physical geography, elementary botany, elementary zoology, or elementary physics.

The examination in Theory of Teaching for both grades of certificates will be based on "Wilkinson's School Management" and "Kirkpatrick's Rural School from Within".

Persons not prepared to pass a thorough examination in all of the required subjects should not enter the class.

To Work or Fight.

Every man of draft age must work or fight after July 1 under a drastic amendment to the selective service regulation announced by Provost Marshal General Crowder. Not only idlers but all draft registrants engaged in what are termed non-useful occupations are to be haled before local boards and given their choice of new jobs or the army. Gamblers, track and bucket shop attendants and fortune tellers head the list but which also includes waiters and bartenders, theater ushers, passenger and elevator operators and other attendants of clubs, hotels, stores, etc., and domestic clerks in stores. The regulations may require professional baseball players to work or join the army. Baseball players, as well as jockeys, professional golfers and other professional sportsmen, Crowder said, will be affected by the regulations if strictly enforced. He said that he did not desire to make civic rulings now, only in such cases that came to him from local boards after July 1. Theatres are excepted from the regulations at the direction of Secretary of War Baker who is said to feel that the people cannot do without all amusements and that other amusements could be dispensed with more readily. Definite classification on account of dependent was disregarded entirely in applying the rule. They may be at the bottom of class 4 but if he fails in the regulation and refuses useful employment he will be given a full number in class 1, that will send him into military service forthwith. Local boards are to use their discretion where enforcement of the regulation would result in disproportionate hardships on his dependents.

Four suits to recover damages, amounting in all to $13,700, have been filed in the office of the Prothonotary at Carlisle by attorneys for the family of Robert H. Myers, of Penn township, against W. C. Bettilyon, head of the Carlisle Plumbing and Heating Company. The suits are the result of an accident which occurred on March 11, when the two passenger roadster in which Bettilyon and his wife were coming to Carlisle struck the Myers car near Hogestown, overturning it and injuring Mrs. Myers and several other members of the party. It is claimed that Bettilyon was driving at excessive speed.

ROAD TO HAPPINESS—Be amiable, cheerful and good natured and you are much more likely to be happy. You will find this difficult, if not impossible, however, when you are constantly troubled with constipation. Take Chamberlain's Tablets and get rid of that and it will be easy. These tablets not only move the bowels, but improve the appetite and strengthen the digestion.

A large bank barn on the farm of Edw. B. Stoner, of Hallam, located in Lower Windsor township, about a mile north of East Prospect, was struck by lightning during a heavy electrical storm, on Tuesday afternoon and was burned to the ground. The live stock and most of the contents were saved, but a load of hay, which was removed from the burning building, became ignited and was consumed along with the wagon. With the hay wagon were burned a manure spreader and mowing machine.

BEST REMEDY FOR WHOOPING COUGH—"Last winter when my little boy had the whooping cough I gave him Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," writes Mrs. J. B. Roberts, East St. Louis, Ill. "It kept his cough loose and relieved him of those dreadful coughing spells. It is the only cough medicine I keep in the house because I have the most confidence in it." This remedy is also good for colds and croup.

NIKKY IS TORN BETWEEN LOVE AND A SENSE OF DUTY AND LOYALTY TO HIS KING.

Synopsis.—Prince Ferdinand William Otto, heir to the throne of Livonia, is unaware of plots of the terrorists to form a republic. His grandfather, the king, in order to preserve the kingdom, arranges for the marriage of Princess Hedwig, Otto's cousin, to King Karl of Karnia. Hedwig rebels because of an attachment she has formed for Captain Nikky Larisch, Prince Otto's personal attendant. Countess Loschek, attached to the menage of Archduchess Annunziata, is in love with the king of Karnia, for whom she acts as spy. She is threatened by the committee of ten, leaders of the terrorists, unless she bows to the committee's will and helps to secrete the crown prince when the king, who is very ill, dies.

CHAPTER XI.

As a Man May Love a Woman.

Hedwig came to tea that afternoon. She came in softly, and defiantly, for she was doing a forbidden thing, but Prince Ferdinand William Otto had put away the frame against such a contingency. He had, as a matter of fact, been putting cold cloths on Miss Braithwaite's forehead.

"I always do it," he informed Hedwig. "I like doing it. It gives me something to do. She likes them rather dry, so the water doesn't run down her neck."

Had Miss Braithwaite not been ill, Hedwig would have talked things over with her then. There was no one else to whom she could go. Hedwig refused to consider the prospect of marriage as anything but pleasurable, and between her mother and Hedwig there had never been any close relationship.

But Miss Braithwaite lay motionless, her face set in lines of suffering, and after a time Hedwig rose and tiptoed out of the room.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto was excited. Tea had already come, and on the rare occasions when the governess was ill, it was his privilege to pour the tea.

"Nikky is coming," he said rapidly, "and the three of us will have a party. Please don't tell me how you like your tea, and see if I can remember."

"Very well, dear," Hedwig said gently, and went to the window.

Nikky entered almost immediately.

As a matter of fact, although he showed no trace of it, Nikky had been having an extremely bad time since his return; the chancellor, who may or may not have known that his heart was breaking, had given him a very severe scolding on the way back from Weddington. It did Nikky good, too, for it roused him to his own defense, and made him forget, for a few minutes anyhow, that life was over for him, and that the chancellor carried his death sentence in his old leather dispatch case.

After that, arriving in the capital, they had driven to the little office in a back street, and there Nikky had roused himself again enough to give a description of Peter Niburg, and to give the location of the house where he lived. But he slumped again after that, ate no dinner, and spent a longish time in the place, staring up at Annunziata's windows, where he had once seen Hedwig on the balcony.

Then, late in the evening, Nikky was summoned to the king's bedroom, and came out pale, with his shoulders very square. He had received a real warning this time, and even contemplated throwing himself in the river. Only he could swim so daintily well!

But he had the natural elasticity of youth, and a sort of persistent belief in his own luck, rather like the chancellor's confidence in seven as a number—a confidence, by the way, which the countess could easily have shaken. So he had wakened the next morning rather cheerful than otherwise, and over a breakfast of broiled ham had refused to look ahead farther than the day.

That afternoon, in the study, Nikky hesitated when he saw Hedwig. Then he came and bent low over her hand. And Hedwig, because every instinct yearned to touch his shining bent head, spoke to him very calmly, was rather distant, a little cold.

"You have been away, I think?" she said.

"For a day or two, highness."

"And today," he added, reproachfully, "today you did not ride."

"I did not feel like riding," Hedwig responded listlessly. "I am tired. I think I am always tired."

"Lemon and two lamps," muttered the crown prince. "That's Nikky's Hedwig. Give it to him, please."

Nikky went a trifle pale as their fingers touched. But he tasted his tea, and pronounced it excellent.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto chattered excitedly. He told of the dog, dilating on its cleverness, but passing politely over the manner of its return. Now, when he was Hedwig glanced at Nikky, and he was not looking, and always, when they dared, the young soldier's eyes were on her.

"She will take some tea without sugar," announced the crown prince.

While he poured it, Hedwig was thinking. Was it possible that Nikky, of every one, should have been chosen to carry to Kari the marriage arrangements? What an irony! What a jest! It was true there was a change in him. He looked subdued, almost sad. "To Karnia?" she asked, when Prince Ferdinand William Otto had left the room. "Officially?"

"Not—exactly."

"Where, in Karnia?"

"I ended," Nikky confessed, "at Weddington."

Hedwig gazed at him, her elbows propped on the tea table. "Then," she said, "I think you know."

"I know, highness."

"And you have nothing to say?"

"Highness," Nikky began huskily, "you know what I would say. And that I cannot. To take advantage of Otto's fancy for me, a child's liking, to violate the confidence of those who placed me here—I am doing that, every moment."

"What about me?" Hedwig asked.

"Do I count for nothing? Does it not matter at all how I feel, whether I am happy or wretched? Isn't that as important as honor?"

Nikky flung out his hands. "You know," he said rapidly, "What can I tell you that you do not know a thousand times? I love you. Not as a subject may adore his princess, but as a man loves a woman."

She drew herself up. "Love!" she said. "I do not call that love."

"It is greater love than you know," said poor Nikky. But all his courage died a moment later, and his resolution with it, for without warning Hedwig dropped her head on her hands and, crumpling forlornly, fell to sobbing.

"I counted on you," she said wildly. "And you are like the others. No one cares how wretched I am. I wish I might die."

Then indeed Nikky was lost. In an instant he was on his knees beside her, his arms close about her, his head bowed against her breast. And Hedwig relaxed to his embrace. When at last he turned and looked up at her, it was Hedwig who bent and kissed him.

"At least," she whispered, "we have had this. We can always remember, whatever comes, that we have had this."

But Nikky was of very human stuff, and not the sort that may live by memories. He was very haggard when he rose to his feet—haggard, and his mouth was doggedly set. "I will never give you up, now," he said.

Brave words, of course. But as he said them he realized their futility.

"We will go away, Nikky," she said.

The eyes he turned on her were, as he claimed her, without hope. For there was no escape.

Hedwig, with shining eyes, was already planning.

"We will go away, Nikky," she said, "and it must be soon, because otherwise—"

Nikky dared not touch her again, knowing what he had to say. "Dearest," he said, bending toward her, "that is what we cannot do."

"No?" She looked up, puzzled, but still confident. "And why, cowardly one?"

"Because I have given my word to remain with the crown prince." Then, seeing that she still did not comprehend, he explained, swiftly. He stood, as many a man has stood before, between love and loyalty to his king, and he was a soldier. He had no choice.

It was terrible to him to see the light die out of her eyes. But even as he told her of the dangers that compassed the child and possibly others of the family, he saw that they touched her remotely, if at all.

All she said, when Nikky finished, was: "I might have known it. Of course they would get me, as they did the others." But a moment later she rose and threw out her arms. "How skillful they are! They knew about it. It is all a part of the plot. They made you promise never to desert Otto, so that their arrangements need not be interfered with. Oh, I know them, better than you do. They are all cruel. It is the blood."

That evening the Princess Hedwig went unannounced to her grandfather's apartment, and demanded to be allowed to enter.

A gentleman in waiting bowed deeply, but stood before the door. "Your highness must pardon my reminding your highness," he said firmly, "that no one may enter his majesty's presence without permission."

"Then go in," said Hedwig, in a white rage, "and get the permission."

The gentleman in waiting went in, very deliberately, because his dignity was outraged. The moment he had gone, however, Hedwig flung the door open, and followed, standing, a figure of tragic defiance, inside the heavy curtains of the king's bedroom.

"There is no use saying you won't see me, grandfather. For here I am."

They eyed each other, the one, it must be told, a trifle uneasily, the other desperately. Then into the king's eyes came a flash of admiration, and just a gleam of amusement.

"So I perceive," he said. "Come here, Hedwig."

A sister of charity was standing by the king's bed. She had cared for him through many illnesses. In the intervals she retired to her cloister and read holy books and sewed for the poor.

The sister went out, her black habit dragging, but she did not sew. Some time later she heard bitter crying in the royal bed chamber, and the king's tones, soothing now and very sad.

"There is a higher duty than happiness," he said. "There are greater things than love. And one day you will know this."

When she went in Hedwig had gone, and the old king, lying in his bed, was looking at the portrait of his dead son.

The following morning the Countess Loschek left for a holiday. She had the choice of two alternatives, to do as she had been commanded, for it amounted to that, or to die. The committee would not kill her, in case she failed them. It would be unnecessary. Enough that they place the letter and the code in the hands of the authorities, by some anonymous means. Well enough she knew the chancellor's inflexible anger, and the Archduchess Annunziata's cold rage. They would sweep her away with a gesture, and she would die the death of all traitors.

A week! Time had been when a week of the dragging days at the palace had seemed eternity. Now the hours flew. The gold clock on her dressing table, a gift from the archduchess, marked them with flying hands.

During the afternoon came a package, rather unsightly tied with a gift cord. Opening it, the countess disclosed a glove box of wood, with a design of rather shabby violets burnt into the cover. Inside was a note:

I am very sorry you are sick. This is to put your clothes in when you travel. Please excuse the work. I have done it in a hurry.

FERDINAND WILLIAM OTTO.

Suddenly the countess laughed, choking hysterical laughter that alarmed Minna; horrible laughter, which left her paler than ever, and gasping.

The old castle of the Loscheks looked grim and inhospitable when she reached it that night. Built during the years when the unbeliever overran southern Europe, it stood in a commanding position over a valley, and a steep, walled road led up to it.

But its ancient glory and good reputation departed, its garrison gone, its drawbridge and meat things of the past, its very hangings and furnishings moldering from long neglect, it hung over the valley, a past menace, an empty threat.

To this dreary refuge the countess had fled. She wanted the silence of its still rooms in which to think. Wretched herself, its wretchedness called her. As the carriage which had brought her from the railway turned into its woods, and she breathed the pungent odor of pine and balsam, she relaxed for the first time.

Why was she so hopeless? She could escape. She knew the woods well. None who followed her could know them so well. She would get away, and somewhere, in a new world, make a fresh start. Surely, after all, peace was the greatest thing in the world.

The carriage drove on; Minna, on the box, crossed herself at sight of the church, and chatted with the driver, a great figure who crowded her to the very edge of the seat.

"I am glad to be here," she said. "I am sick of grandeur. My home is in Etzel." She turned and inspected the man beside her. "You are a newcomer, I think?"

"I have but just come to Etzel."

"Then you cannot tell me about my people." She was disappointed.

"And you," inquired the driver, "you will stay for a visit?"

"A week only. But better than nothing."

"After that, you return to the city?"

"Yes, Madame the countess—you would know, if you were Etzel-born—madame the countess is lady in waiting to her royal highness, the Archduchess Annunziata."

"So!" said the driver. But he was not curious, and the broken road demanded his attention. He was but newly come, so very newly that he did not know his way, and once made a wrong turning.

The countess relaxed. She slept that night.

When she had breakfasted and dressed, she went out on a balcony, and looked down at the valley. Her eyes dropped to the old wall below, where in the sunshine the caretaker was beating a rug. Close to him, in intimate and cautious conversation, was the driver of the night before. Glancing up, they saw her and at once separated.

Gone was peace, then. The countess knew—now certainly. "Our eyes see everywhere." Eyes, indeed—eyes that even now the caretaker raised furtively from his rug.

Nevertheless, the countess was minded to experiment, to be certain. For now is so suspicious, she knew, as one who fears suspicion. None so guilty as the guilty. During the forenoon she walked through the woods, going briskly, with vigorous, mountain-bred feet. No crackle of underbrush disturbed her. Swift turnings revealed no lurking figures skulking behind the trunks of trees. But where an ancient stone bridge crossed a mountain stream, she came on the huge driver of the night before reflectively fishing.

He saluted her gravely, and the countess paused and looked at him. "You have caught no fish, my friend?" she said.

"No, madame. But one plays about my hook."

She turned back. Eyes everywhere, and arms, great hairy arms. And feet that, for all their size, must step lightly!

On the second day she made a desperate resolve, and characteristically put it into execution at once. She sent for the caretaker. When he came, uneasy, for the Loscheks were justly feared in the countryside, and even the thing of which he knew gave him small courage, she lost no time in evasion.

"Go," she said, "and bring here your accomplice."

"My accomplice, madame! I do not—"

"You heard me," she said.

He turned, half sullen, half terrified, and paused. "Which do you refer to, madame?"

She had seen only the one. Then there were others. Who could tell how many others?

"The one who drove here."

So he went, leaving her to desperate reflection. When he returned, it was to usher in the heavy figure of the spy.

"Which of you is in authority?" she demanded.

"I, madame." It was the spy who spoke.

She dismissed the caretaker with a gesture.

"Have you any discretion over me? Or must you refer matters to those who sent you?"

"I must refer to them."

"How long will it take to send a message and receive a reply?"

He considered. "Until tomorrow night, madame."

Another day gone, then, and nothing determined!

"Now, listen," she said, "and listen carefully. I have come here to decide a certain question. Whether you know what that question is or not, does not matter. But before I decide it I must take a certain journey. I wish to make that journey. It is into Karnia."

She watched him. "It is impossible. My instructions—"

"I am not asking your permission. I wish to send a letter to the committee. They, and they alone, will determine this thing. Will you send the letter?"

When he hesitated, perplexed, she got up and moved to her writing table. "I shall write the letter," she said haughtily. "See that it is sent. When I report at the end of the time that I have sent such a letter, you can judge better than I the result if it has not been received."

He was reluctant, but she wrote the letter and gave it to him, her face proud and scornful. But she was not easy, for all that, and she watched from her balcony to see if any messenger left the castle and descended the mountain road. She was rewarded, an hour later, by seeing a figure leave the old gateway and start aloft toward the village, a pale faced man with colorless hair. A part of the hidden guard that surrounded her, she knew, and somehow familiar. But, although she racked her brains, she could not remember where she had seen him.

That day, toward evening, the huge man presented himself. He brought no observed the chancellor. "He is forty

"Aye," said the king. "And at forty a bad man changes his nature, and purifies himself in marriage! Non-sense. Karl will be as he has always been. But we have gone into this before. Only, I am sorry for Hedwig. Get rid of this young Larisch."

The chancellor sat reeking, his chin dropped forward on his breast. "Otto will miss him."

"Well, out with it. I may not dismiss him. What, then?"

"It is always easy to send men away. But it is sometimes better to retain them, and force them to your will. We have here an arrangement that is satisfactory. Larisch is keen, young, and loyal. Hedwig has thrown herself at him. For that, she is responsible, not he."

"Then get rid of her," growled the king.

The chancellor rose. "If the situation is left to me, sire," he said, "I will promise two things. That Otto will keep his friend, and that the Princess Hedwig will bow to your wishes without further argument."

"Do it, and God help you," said the king, again with the flicker of amusement.

The chancellor had gone home, walking heavily along the darkening streets. Once again he had conquered. The reins remained in his guarded old hands. And he was about to put the honor of the country into the keeping of the son of Maria Menrad, whom he had once loved.

So now he sat in his study, and waited. When he heard Nikky's quick step as he came along the old passage, he picked up his pipe.

Nikky saluted, and made his way across the room in the darkness, with the ease of familiarity. "I am late, sir," he apologized. "What and our men, and he is safely jaded. He made no resistance."

"Sit down," said the chancellor. And, touching a bell, he asked Mathilde for coffee. "So we have him," he reflected. "The next thing is to discover if he knows who his assailants were. That, and the person for whom he acted—however, I sent for you for another reason. What is this about the Princess Hedwig?"

"The Princess Hedwig?"

"What folly, boy! A young girl who cannot know her own mind! And for such a bit of romantic trifling you would ruin yourself. It is ruin. You know that."

Nikky remained silent, a little sullen.

"The princess went to the king with her story this evening." The boy started. "A cruel proceeding, but the young are always cruel. The expected result has followed: The king wishes you sent away."

"I am at his command, sir."

The chancellor filled his pipe from a bowl near by, working deliberately. Nikky sat still, rather dead.

"May I ask," he said at last, "that you say to the king that the responsibility is mine? No possible blame can attach to the Princess Hedwig. I love her, and—I am not clever. I show what I feel."

The immediate result," said the chancellor cruelly, "will doubtless be a putting forward of the date of her marriage." Nikky's hands clenched. "A further result would be your dismissal from the army. One does not do such things as you have done, lightly."

"Lightly?" said Nikky Larisch. "Heaven?"

"But," continued the chancellor, "I have a better way. I have faith, for one thing, in your blood. The son of Maria Menrad must be his mother's son. And the crown prince is attached to you. Not for your sake, but for his, I am inclined to be lenient. What I shall demand for that leniency is that no word of love again pass between you and the Princess Hedwig."

"It would be easier to go away."

Nikky closed his eyes. It was getting to be a habit, just as some people crack their knuckles.

"We need our friends about us," the chancellor continued. "The carnival is coming, always a dangerous time for us. The king grows weaker day by day. A crisis is impending for all of us, and we need you."

Nikky rose, steady enough now, but white to the lips.

"I take my word, sir," he said. "I shall say no word of—of how I feel to Hedwig. Not again. She knows—and I think," he added proudly, "that she knows I shall not change. That I shall always—"

"Exactly!" said the chancellor. It was the very pitch of the king's dry old voice. "Of course she knows, being a woman. And now, good night."

The king recommends that Prince Otto study the utterances of—now whom, do you suppose? You couldn't guess in a hundred years. You will find out in the next installment.

NOTICE!

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance, entitled "An Ordinance Regulating the Water Supply, and Water Service in the Borough of New Oxford, Adams County, Penna., Etc." was introduced on the 6th day of May, 1918, for action of Council of the Borough of New Oxford, Adams County, Pa., and that the Council approved the same for publication according to law; and that final action will be taken on said Ordinance on Friday evening June 7th, 1918, at 7:30 o'clock, in the council chamber in the Borough of New Oxford, when and where objections, if any, will be heard and considered.

THOS. E. BOWER,
Secretary of Town Council.

Ordinance

An Ordinance regulating the Water Supply, and Water Service in the Borough of New Oxford, Adams County, Pennsylvania, prescribing Rates for the use thereof, and providing penalties for violation of the Ordinance.

Be it enacted by the Burgess and Town Council of the Borough of New Oxford, Adams County, Pennsylvania, and it is hereby enacted and ordained by the authority of the same, that the following Rules and Regulations, Rates and Penalties, for the supply and use of Water to the Citizens of said Borough, be and are hereby adopted, and approved:

1. The water of the Borough Water Plant shall not be used by any person who shall not first have obtained a permit signed by the Chairman of the Water Committee or some member of said Committee duly authorized and appointed by him, nor for any other purpose than shall be specified in said permit.

2. No attachment shall be made to the main pipe, nor detachment from it, except under the direction and control of the said Water Committee; nor shall any additional attachment be made to any consumer's service pipe for any purpose than that specified in the permit until the same has been entered upon his or her permit.

3. All water rents shall be paid quarterly in advance. Failure to pay the same within 30 days after it is due may be regarded by the Water Committee as notice of a desire to discontinue the use of the water and it may detach the branch or, at its option, compel payment.

4. Any member of the Water Committee shall have the right, at all reasonable times, to enter the premises where water has been introduced, for any purpose connected with the use of the water and the interest of the said Borough.

5. It shall be the duty of persons holding a permit to keep their pipes, hydrants and faucets in good repair, so that the water may not be wasted. No consumer will be allowed to supply water to others, except by permission of the Water Committee. If found so doing, he or she will be liable to have the supply stopped and the rent already paid forfeited.

6. In sprinkling yards or lawns, washing pavements or windows, each water taker must confine himself to his own premises. Hose larger than one inch will not be permitted, and sprinkling without a nozzle, or larger opening than one-fourth inch, is forbidden.

7. Water from Fire Hoses shall be used only in case of Fire, and at no other time without special authority from the Water Committee, or by Fire Marshall for testing purposes.

8. Any consumer wishing to discontinue the use of Water shall give notice thereof at least 10 days previous to the end of the quarter, otherwise water rent will be charged for the ensuing three months.

9. Any fraudulent misrepresentations in regard to the use of water, or any wilful or negligent waste of the same, shall be deemed a cause for forfeiture.

10. Should the supply of water at any time be stopped for any cause, the Borough shall not be held for damages.

11. The Borough reserves the right to restrict the water supply generally or especially, as in its judgment may be found necessary.

12. The box on the inside of the curb line and the stop-cock on the service pipe in the box, shall be under the control of the Borough.

13. No sprinkling of pavements, streets or lawns shall be allowed between the hours of 8 A. M. and 4 P. M.

14. No Tap for building purposes shall be connected with the main pipe unless the party who secures a permit therefor shall agree to use the water in such building when completed, subject to the regulations, and rates under this ordinance.

15. Any person who shall without written permission, open communication with the water main or other service pipe, or turn the water on after it has been turned off by the Borough authorities, or in any wise impair the water supply, or injure the fire hydrants, or middle with the water supply, service pipes, or fire plugs, shall, upon conviction thereof, be sentenced to pay a fine not exceeding $50.00, or undergo imprisonment in the Borough Lock-up for a period not exceeding 30 days.

16. The consumer shall be obliged to lay the pipe from the curb line to the buildings and keep the same in proper repair, at his own expense, but the Water Committee shall have full supervision over the same.

17. A full year's rate will be charged for a permit for a pave wash, or for the sprinkling of streets or lawns, but the consumer shall have the right to make payments thereon, quarterly, in advance; in all other instances, the consumer shall have the right to discontinue the water as provided for in Section 8 of this Ordinance.

18. Any person or persons violating the provisions of this ordinance, or section thereof, so far as same relates to the Rules and Regulations, Rates and Service herein provided, shall forfeit any water rents already paid to the Borough, and the Borough authorities shall have the right to cut off the supply of water from such consumer, and the water service shall not be restored to the parties so offending except by special permit from Council.

19. This ordinance shall go into effect on the 1st day of July, 1918, and permits shall be required from all persons from and after that date.

Mrs. Wm. Decker, a resident of Glen Rock was found dead Wednesday morning lying on the floor in the kitchen of her home. Death was probably due to heart trouble. Indications showed that Mrs. Decker was stricken while washing the breakfast dishes shortly after her husband had departed for work. The body was found by Mrs. Decker's sister, Miss Frazier.

Gives Advice To Sufferers

Misery Was His Daily Companion Until Master Medicine Came to His Relief.

"I had catarrh of the stomach in its most drastic form," says Henry Fenstermacher, a well known cement worker, of Allentown, Pa.

"This had spread down into my lower bowels and words cannot describe my sufferings.

"I hated to see morning come, for as soon as I got up I would suffer an attack of nausea and there would come a boring pain in my abdomen that would double me up like a jackknife.

"My appetite was good, but I didn't dare to eat, for so sure as I ate even the simplest food there would follow those agonizing pains I also suffered constantly from sick headache.

"I tried remedy after remedy, and I don't know how many prescriptions, but I just kept on getting worse instead of better.

"I had almost lost hope of ever getting well when I began using Tanlac. It was wonderful how quickly it relieved me.

"Now I have been entirely relieved and have no more suffering. Those pains in my stomach have disappeared, my bowels are as regular as clock work, my headaches are gone and I can eat heartily and enjoy every mouthful."

Tanlac, the famous Master Medicine, is now sold here by Ed. T. Auker, druggist—adv.

HIS JOB TO BANDAGE WOUNDED HOUSES

American Boss Carpenter Putting French Villages Back on the Map.

It was a monotonous stretch of ugly trench, wire entanglements, gaping shell holes, accented by the blackened skeleton of shell killed forests silhouetted against a dull, hopeless sky.

This had once been beautiful rolling land like our own Ohio and Indiana—rich in grain fields, orchards and gardens. Now it was desolation—nothing could live there—seemingly nothing did.

We had come on some rising ground, and as we climbed we reached the brow of the slope, and of a sudden it seemed that some giant had suddenly twisted the old world under our feet and we were back home, for of a sudden the sounds of life came up to us out of a bustling center of industry. That satisfying chug of an honest hammer head sinking willing nail into sound wood, and before us was a panorama of new building, with piles of clean lumber stacked here and there, and the framing of many new buildings told where the wood was going. Then we heard the voice of a man who talked real "United States"—telling 27 other carpenters what to do—out in this foreign land thousands of miles from home.

We inquired of the boss as to who he was, and with true sense of humor he said: "I am a Red Cross nurse. My job is bandaging wounded houses."

Putting Villages Back on Map. "This was once a French village," he went on to say, "in the center of fine sugar beet country. We are living now on the site of the sugar mill," he said, pointing to a long, low barracks, which plainly had been recently built.

"We are working for the American Red Cross—putting villages back on the map. In four more weeks we'll be out of here and on our way to the next ruin, for there are many villages that need us. We go from place to place, always finding that our lumber has reached there first, so we can get right to work, clean up and move on again."

It is just like pioneering, this rebuilding work of our Red Cross—only more important—more important because it is vital to the winning of the war that these people come back to their soil and plant new crops—for future years of war or peace.

And so the tide of war sweeps back from whence it came, a Red Cross army follows close behind in uniforms of overalls, armed with Yankee hammers and nails to coax back the foundlings that have been brushed into squalid helplessness in the south and east.

They are coming back home now, just a few days behind these carpenters—back to the beet fields, the gardens and the farms. Soon they will be feeding themselves and thousands of others.

WHITE PLAGUE KILLS MORE MEN THAN BULLETS

It seems longer, but it was less than four years ago that the nations had not yet started in to wipe each other off the map and that the only times when one heard of the Red Cross were times of flood or disaster and at Christmas time, when the peaceful little Red Cross tuberculosis seals made their annual appearance.

Perhaps, in fact, it was the long, ardent fight in America against the White Plague which, in spite of the war's enormous new demands, is responsible for the especial interest being taken by the American Red Cross in France's frightful struggle against consumption.

This scourge seems to mark the trench fighter for its own. It kills more men than do bullets and poison gas combined. Until the American Red Cross was permitted by the French government to start its drive against tuberculosis it looked as if, even with a victory over the Hun, France might eventually be conquered by this deadly foe.

Already things are looking brighter. The Red Cross has taken over old hospitals and built new ones. More than 300 tuberculosis dispensaries are to be opened throughout the country, and Red Cross doctors and nurses—scores of them—are devoting themselves exclusively to this fight, doing over there exactly the same kind of work which is financed in America by the little Christmas seals. It is one of the ways in which by our contributions to the Red Cross America can repay her debt to France.

Let Uncle Sam have the coal

Thousands of tons of coal will be saved this summer in homes that formerly used a kitchen range all during the hot weather. These homes are going to use oil cook stoves so there will be more coal next winter and therefore more for the government. Will your home be one of them? It should be.

NEW PERFECTION OIL COOK-STOVES

will be in the majority of these homes and there should be one in yours. You will not only save coal—you will save money. Kerosene is far cheaper than coal. And with a New Perfection you can have the same good things to eat and with less work, trouble and time. It doesn't heat up the whole kitchen like a coal fire does, either. You can regulate the heat exactly as you want it. No fire to fix. No ashes to bother with. Many good cooks prefer to use a New Perfection the year 'round.

But they get the best results (and you will too) when they use Atlantic Rayolight Oil instead of ordinary kerosene. The difference is in the quality—the way it is refined and purified. All waste matter is taken out. All the heat-producing elements are left in. Atlantic Rayolight is a superior kerosene yet the price is no more than for the other kinds. There's a dealer near you who sells Atlantic Rayolight Oil. Look for the sign, "Atlantic Rayolight Oil For Sale Here." Decide right now that you will have a New Perfection Oil Cook Stove this summer.

Your dealer can show you one now. Go and see it today.

Extra charge for carrying coal is as follows: 2000 lbs., 40 cts.; 1000 lbs., 25 cts.; 500 lbs., 15 cts.

No dealer is allowed to deliver coal to a consumer unless the consumer to whom the coal is to be delivered has first signed the card as provided by the fuel administration. These cards may be signed at the office of any of the dealers and it is urged that all consumers who desire putting in any part of their year's supply during the summer months, sign their cards and place their orders. Signing of the cards does not mean the placing of an order but is simply a statement of the year's requirements, and each consumer who desires to put in coal during the summer should be sure not only that they have signed a card but that they have also placed their order.

Lightning cut a peculiar caper with John Taylor, of Hanover. As he was crossing the school grounds during the severe storm on Tuesday evening, a bolt of lightning struck the front wheel of his bicycle precipitating the surprised youth to the ground. Fortunately he was not injured in the least but the front wheel of the bike was demolished. The spokes were twisted in all shapes thru each other and the wood rim torn into splinters.

Liberty Loan's Complete Total.

After a vast amount of work in which figures from all the banking institutions in Adams county had to be tabulated, William F. Sunday, publicity manager of the Third Liberty Loan campaign, announced the final figures for the county, showing the allotment and subscriptions in every town and township, the population and the number of subscribers. The county's official allotment was $1,014,600, though a higher figure, $1,069,000, was used throughout the campaign due to an error made at the headquarters of the Third Reserve District. The total amount of the subscriptions here was $1,392,650 so that the county overshot the mark by almost $400,000, or over 37 per cent. There were 6304 subscribers out of a total population of 34,319, showing more than 18 per cent of our people bought bonds. Every borough in the county went over the top, and all of the townships except five. They were Berwick, Butler, Conewago, Tyrone and Union. In Tyrone township, the Second District went across with $14,750 against an allotment of $12,300, and 84 subscribers out of 421 people. The largest percentage of purchasers was registered in the Second Ward of Gettysburg where more than forty five per cent of the population bought bonds.

Injured In Auto-Motorcycle Crash.

In a collision between an auto and motorcycle occurring near Thomassville, on the Lincoln Highway, at 11:45 o'clock on Sunday night Clarence McConley, York, was seriously injured, having possibly sustained a fractured skull, and Miss Mabel Shearer, a nurse of the Philadelphia general hospital, who is stopping with her grandfather in York, received a severe laceration of the left knee, and bruised and captured contusions about the body. McConley was delivered for an hour after the accident, suffering from concussion of the brain, a gash on the forehead laying the flesh open to the skull bone. The auto owned and driven by Claud Heiner, was going westward. The motorcycle, driven by McConley, with Miss Shearer on the rear seat, was going toward York. It is said that the motorcycle took the extreme right of the road, and that the accident was unavoidable on the driver's part. The vehicles met with such force that the auto was put out of commission, and the motorcycle was completely demolished.

Theodore Furhman, of Hanover, was arrested, Saturday afternoon, on oath of C. E. Miller and the J. S. Young Co. On Friday, it is claimed, Furhman went to the Young warehouse and purchased 50 bushels of corn and had it charged to his father, Wm. Furhman then, it is alleged, took the corn to the Hanover mill and disposed of it and received the money. On Saturday, it is further claimed, he went to the Miller warehouse and purchased 25 bushels of corn and also had this charged to his father. He then sold it at the Young warehouse. Furhman was taken to the York jail to await a hearing on Friday morning.

Corporal Ray L. Woodward, Co. D, 327th battalion, Tank Engineer, Camp Colt, Gettysburg, was arrested on Monday afternoon as a deserter. Woodward has been absent from camp for several weeks.

NIKKY IS TORN BETWEEN LOVE AND A SENSE OF DUTY AND LOYALTY TO HIS KING.

Synopsis.—Prince Ferdinand William Otto, heir to the throne of Livonia, is unaware of plots of the terrorists to form a republic. His grandfather, the king, in order to preserve the kingdom, arranges for the marriage of Princess Hedwig, Otto's cousin, to King Karl of Karnia. Hedwig rebels because of an attachment she has formed for Captain Nikky Larisch, Prince Otto's personal attendant. Countess Loschek, attached to the menage of Archduchess Annunziata, is in love with the king of Karnia, for whom she acts as spy. She is threatened by the committee of ten, leaders of the terrorists, unless she bows to the committee's will and helps to secrete the crown prince when the king, who is very ill, dies.

CHAPTER XI.

As a Man May Love a Woman.

Hedwig came to tea that afternoon. She came in softly, and defiantly, for she was doing a forbidden thing, but Prince Ferdinand William Otto had put away the frame against such a contingency. He had, as a matter of fact, been putting cold cloths on Miss Braithwaite's forehead.

"I always do it," he informed Hedwig. "I like doing it. It gives me something to do. She likes them rather dry, so the water doesn't run down her neck."

Had Miss Braithwaite not been ill, Hedwig would have talked things over with her then. There was no one else to whom she could go. Hilda refused to consider the prospect of marriage as anything but pleasurable, and between her mother and Hedwig there had never been any close relationship.

But Miss Braithwaite lay motionless, her face set in lines of suffering, and after a time Hedwig rose and tiptoed out of the room.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto was excited. Tea had already come, and on the rare occasions when the governess was ill, it was his privilege to pour the tea.

"Nikky is coming," he said rapidly, "and the three of us will have a party. Please don't tell me how you like your tea, and see if I can remember."

"Very well, dear," Hedwig said gently, and went to the window.

Nikky entered almost immediately. As a matter of fact, although he showed no trace of it, Nikky had been having an extremely bad time since his return; the chancellor, who may or may not have known that his heart was breaking, had given him a very severe scolding on the way back from Wedeling. It did Nikky good, too, for it roused him to his own defense, and made him forget, for a few minutes anyhow, that life was over for him, and that the chancellor carried his death sentence in his old leather dispatch case.

"At least," she whispered, "we have had this. We can always remember, whatever comes, that we have had this."

But Nikky was of very human stuff, and not the sort that may live by memories. He was very haggard when he rose to his feet—haggard, and his mouth was doggedly set. "I will never give you up, now," he said.

Brave words, of course. But as he said them he realized their futility.

Then, late in the evening, Nikky was summoned to the king's bedroom, and came out pale, with his shoulders very square. He had received a real wigging this time, and even contemplated throwing himself in the river. Only he could swim so damnably well!

But he had the natural elasticity of youth, and a sort of persistent belief in his own luck, rather like the chancellor's confidence in seven as a number—a confidence, by the way, which the countess could easily have shaken. So he had wakened the next morning rather cheerful than otherwise, and over a breakfast of broiled ham had refused to look ahead farther than the day.

That afternoon, in the study, Nikky hesitated when he saw Hedwig. Then he came and bent low over her hand. And Hedwig, because every instinct yearned to touch his shining bent head, spoke to him very calmly, was rather distant, a little cold.

"You have been away, I think?" she said.

"For a day or two, highness. And today," he added, reproachfully, "today you did not ride." "I did not feel like riding," Hedwig responded listlessly. "I am tired. I think I am always tired."

"Lemon and two lumps," muttered the crown prince. "That's Nikky's. Hedwig. Give it to him, please."

Nikky went a trifle pale as their fingers touched. But he tasted his tea, and pronounced it excellent.

Prince Ferdinand William Otto chattered excitedly. He told of the dog, dilating on its cleverness, but passing politely over the manner of its return. Now and then Hedwig glanced at Nikky, when he was not looking, and always, when they dared, the young soldier's eyes were on her.

"She will take some tea without sugar," announced the crown prince. While he poured it, Hedwig was thinking. Was it possible that Nikky, of every one, should have been chosen to carry to Karl the marriage message?

ments? What an irony! What a jest! It was true there was a change in him. He looked subdued, almost sad. "To Karnia?" she asked, when Prince Ferdinand William Otto had left the room. "Officially?"

"Not—exactly." "Where, in Karnia?" "I ended," Nikky confessed, "at Wedeling."

Hedwig gazed at him, her elbows propped on the tea table. "Then," she said, "I think you know."

"I know, highness."

"And you have nothing to say?"

"Highness," Nikky began huskily, "you know what I would say. And that I cannot. To take advantage of Otto's fancy for me, a child's liking, to violate the confidence of those who placed me here—I am doing that, every moment."

"What about me?" Hedwig asked.

"Do I count for nothing? Does it not matter at all how I feel, whether I am happy or wretched? Isn't that as important as honor?"

Nikky lunged out his hands. "You know," he said rapidly, "What can I tell you that you do not know a thousand times? I love you. Not as a subject may adore his princess, but as a man loves a woman."

She drew herself up. "Love!" she said. "I do not call that love."

"It is greater love than you know," said poor Nikky. But all his courage died a moment later, and his resolution with it, for without warning Hedwig dropped her head on her hands and, crouching forlornly, fell to sobbing.

"I counted on you," she said wildly. "And you are like the others. No one cares how wretched I am. I wish I might die."

Then indeed Nikky was lost. In an instant he was on his knees beside her, his arms close about her, his head bowed against her breast. And Hedwig relaxed to his embrace. When at last he turned and looked up at her, it was Hedwig who bent and kissed him.

"At least," she whispered, "we have had this. We can always remember, whatever comes, that we have had this."

But Nikky was of very human stuff, and not the sort that may live by memories. He was very haggard when he rose to his feet—haggard, and his mouth was doggedly set. "I will never give you up, now," he said.

remain with the crown prince." Then, seeing that she still did not comprehend, he explained, swiftly. He stood, as many a man has stood before, between love and loyalty to his king, and he was a soldier. He had no choice.

It was terrible to him to see the light die out of her eyes. But even as he told her of the dangers that compassed the child and possibly others of the family, he saw that they touched her remotely, if at all.

All she said, when Nikky finished, was: "I might have known it. Of course they would get me, as they did the others." But a moment later she rose and threw out her arms. "How skillful they are! They knew about it. It is all a part of the plot. They made you promise never to desert Otto, so that their arrangements need not be interfered with. Oh, I know them, better than you do. They are all cruel. It is the blood."

That evening the Princess Hedwig went unannounced to her grandfather's apartment, and demanded to be allowed to enter.

A gentleman in waiting bowed deeply, but stood before the door. "Your highness must pardon my reminding your highness," he said firmly, "that no one may enter his majesty's presence without permission."

"Then go in," said Hedwig, in a white rage, "and get the permission."

The gentleman in waiting went in, very deliberately, because his dignity was outraged. The moment he had gone, however, Hedwig flung the door open, and followed, standing, a figure of tragic defiance, inside the heavy curtains of the king's bedroom.

"There is no use saying you won't see me, grandfather. For here I am."

They eyed each other, the one, it must be told, a trifle uneasily, the other desperately. Then into the king's eyes came a flash of admiration, and just a gleam of amusement.

"So I perceive," he said. "Come here, Hedwig."

A sister of charity was standing by the king's bed. She had cared for him through many illnesses. In the intervals she retired to her cloister and read holy books and sewed for the poor.

The sister went out, her black habit dragging, but she did not sew. Some time later she heard bitter crying in the royal bed chamber, and the king's tones, soothing now and very sad.

"There is a higher duty than happiness," he said. "There are greater things than love. And one day you will know this."

When she went in Hedwig had gone, and the old king, lying in his bed, was looking at the portrait of his dead son.

The following morning the Countess Loschek left for a holiday. She had the choice of but two alternatives, to do as she had been commanded, for it amounted to that, or to die. The committee would not kill her, in case she failed them. It would be unnecessary. Enough that they place the letter and the code in the hands of the authorities, by some anonymous means. Well enough she knew the chancellor's inflexible anger, and the Archduchess Annunziata's cold rage. They would sweep her away with a gesture, and she would die the death of all traitors.

A week! Time had been when a week of the dragging days at the palace had seemed eternity. Now the hours flew. The gold clock on her dressing table, a gift from the archduchess, marked them with flying hands.

During the afternoon came a package, rather unskillfully tied with a gilt cord. Opening it, the countess disclosed a glove box of wood, with a design of rather shabby violets burnt into the cover. Inside was a note:

I am very sorry you are sick. This is to put your gloves in when you travel. Please excuse the work. I have done it in a hurry.

FERDINAND WILLIAM OTTO.

Suddenly the countess laughed, choking hysterical laughter that alarmed Minna; horrible laughter, which left her paler than ever, and gasping.

The old castle of the Loscheks looked grim and inhospitable when she reached it that night. Built during the years when the unbeliever overran southern Europe, it stood in a commanding position over a valley, and a steep, walled road led up to it.

But, its ancient glory and good reputation departed, its garrison gone, its drawbridge and moat things of the past, its very hangings and furnishings moldering from long neglect, it hung over the valley, a past menace, an empty threat.

To this dreary refuge the countess had fled. She wanted the silence of its still rooms in which to think. Wretched herself, its wretchedness called her. As the carriage which had brought her from the railway turned into its woods, and she breathed the pungent odor of pine and balsam, she relaxed for the first time.

Why was she so hopeless? She could escape. She knew the woods well. None who followed her could know them so well. She would get away, and somewhere, in a new world, make a fresh start. Surely, after all, peace was the greatest thing in the world.

The carriage drove on; Minna, on the box, crossed herself at sight of the church, and chatted with the driver, a great figure who crowded her to the very edge of the seat.

"I am glad to be here," she said. "I am sick of grandeur. My home is in Etzel." She turned and inspected the man beside her. "You are a new-comer, I think?"

"I have but just come to Etzel."

"Then you cannot tell me about my people." She was disappointed.

"And you," inquired the driver, "you will stay for a visit?"

"A week only. But better than nothing."

"After that, you return to the city?"

"Yes. Madame the countess—you would know, if you were Etzel-born—madame the countess is lady in waiting to her royal highness, the Archduchess Annunziata."

"So!" said the driver. But he was not curious, and the broken road demanded his attention. He was but newly come, so very newly that he did not know his way, and once made a wrong turning.

The countess relaxed. She slept that night.

When she had breakfasted and dressed, she went out on a balcony, and looked down at the valley. Her eyes dropped to the old wall below, where in the sunshine the caretaker was beating a rug. Close to him, in intimate and cautious conversation, was the driver of the night before. Glancing up, they saw her, and at once separated.

Gone was peace, then. The countess knew—knew certainly. "Our eyes see everywhere." Eyes, indeed—eyes that even now the caretaker raised furtively from his rug.

Nevertheless, the countess was minded to experiment, to be certain. For none is so suspicious, she knew, as one who fears suspicion. None so guilty as the guilty. During the forenoon she walked through the woods, going briskly, with vigorous, mountain-bred feet. No crackle of underbrush disturbed her. Swift turnings revealed no lurking figures skulking behind the trunks of trees. But where an ancient stone bridge crossed a mountain stream, she came on the huge driver of the night before reflectively fishing.

He saluted her gravely, and the countess paused and looked at him. "You have caught no fish, my friend?" she said.

"No, madame. But one plays about my hook."

She turned back. Eyes everywhere, and arms, great hairy arms. And feet that, for all their size, must step lightly!

On the second day she made a desperate resolve, and characteristically put it into execution at once. She sent for the caretaker. When he came, uneasy, for the Loscheks were justly feared in the countryside, and even the thing of which he knew gave him small courage, she lost no time in evasion.

"Go," she said, "and bring here your accomplice."

"My accomplice, madame! I do not—"

"You heard me," she said.

He turned, half sullen, half terrified, and paused. "Which do you refer to, madame?"

She had seen only the one. Then there were others. Who could tell how many others?

"The one who drove here."

So he went, leaving her to desperate reflection. When he returned, it was to usher in the heavy figure of the spy.

"Which of you is in authority?" she demanded.

"I, madame." It was the spy who spoke.

She dismissed the caretaker with a gesture.

"Have you any discretion over me? Or must you refer matters to those who sent you?"

"I must refer to them."

"How long will it take to send a message and receive a reply?"

He considered. "Until tomorrow night, madame."

Another day gone, then, and nothing determined!

"Now, listen," she said, "and listen carefully. I have come here to decide a certain question. Whether you know what that question is or not, does not matter. But before I decide it I must take a certain journey. I wish to make that journey. It is into Karnia."

Lightning cut a peculiar caper with John Taylor, of Hanover. As he was crossing the school grounds during the severe storm on Tuesday evening, a bolt of lightning struck the front wheel of his bicycle precipitating the surprised youth to the ground. Fortunately he was not injured in the least but the front wheel of the bike was demolished. The spokes were twisted in all shapes thru each other and the wood rim torn into splinters.

Liberty Loan's Complete Total.

After a vast amount of work in which figures from all the banking institutions in Adams county had to be tabulated, William F. Sunday, publicity manager of the Third Liberty Loan campaign, announced the final figures for the county, showing the allotment and subscriptions in every town and township, the population and the number of subscribers. The county's official allotment was $1,014,000, though a higher figure, $1,069,000, was used throughout the campaign due to an error made at the headquarters of the Third Reserve District. The total amount of the subscriptions here was $1,392,050 so that the county overshot the mark by almost $400,000, or over 37 per cent. There were 6304 subscribers out of a total population of 34,319, showing more than 18 per cent of our people bought bonds. Every borough in the county went over the top, and all of the townships except five. They were Berwick, Butler, Cone-wago, Tyrone and Union. In Tyrone township, the Second District went across with $14,750 against an allotment of $12,300, and 84 subscribers out of 421 people. The largest percentage of purchasers was registered in the Second Ward of Gettysburg where more than forty five per cent of the population bought bonds.

Injured In Auto-

Motorcycle Crash.

In a collision between an auto and motorcycle occurring near Thomsville, on the Lincoln Highway, at 11:45 o'clock on Sunday night Clarence McConley, York, was seriously injured, having possibly sustained a fractured skull, and Miss Mabel Shearer, a nurse of the Philadelphia general hospital, who is stopping with her grandfather in York, received a severe laceration of the left knee, and bruised and captured contusions about the body. McConley was delirious for an hour after the accident, suffering from concussion of the brain, a gash on the forehead laying the flesh open to the skull bone. The auto owned and driven by Claud Heiner, was going westward. The motorcycle, driven by McConley, with Miss Shearer on the rear seat, was going toward York. It is said that the motorcycle took the extreme right of the road, and that the accident was unavoidable on the driver's part. The vehicles met with such force that the auto was put out of commission, and the motorcycle was completely demolished.

Theodore Fuhman, of Hanover, was arrested, Saturday afternoon, on oath of C. E. Miller and the J. S. Young Co. On Friday, it is claimed, Fuhman went to the Young warehouse and purchased 50 bushels of corn and had it charged to his father, Wm. Fuhman then, it is alleged, took the corn to the Hanover mill and disposed of it and received the money. On Saturday, it is further claimed, he went to the Miller warehouse and purchased 25 bushels of corn and also had this charged to his father. He then sold it at the Young warehouse. Fuhman was taken to the York jail to await a hearing on Friday morning.

Corporal Ray L. Woodward, Co. D, 327th battalion, Tank Engineer, Camp Colt, Gettysburg, was arrested on Monday afternoon as a deserter. Woodward has been absent from camp for several weeks.
